Truman Says Tear Gas Barrage in Strike Battle... Taft Applied Pressure in NLRB Case

Charges Attempt By Senator to 'Put on Heat' in ITU Injunction

President Truman has accused Senator Taft (R., Ohio) of an "entirely improper" attempt to "put the heat" on the National Labor Relations Board to act against the AFL International Typographical Union.

Mr. Truman wrote a letter August 20 to David P. Findling, NLRB associate general counsel. It was made public by the White House yesterday.

The President wrote in reply to a letter from Findling reporting on a meeting of NLRB officials and representatives of several newspapers with Taft at the Capitol on July 28.

Since then, the union has called on Mr. Truman to investigate reports that Taft summoned the aides of Robert N. Denham, NLRB general counsel, to the White House to pressure them into citing the ITU for contempt of court.

White House Conference

Before the letter was released, Mr. Truman conferred with Denham, Findling and another of Denham's aides, Winthrop A. Johns, at the White House.

Since last March 27 the ITU has been under a Federal court order barring it from attempting to incorporate closed shop conditions in negotiating contracts.

Approximately two weeks after the reported meeting with Taft, the NLRB general counsel asked Federal Judge Luther M. Swygert at Indianapolis to find the union in contempt for violating his court order.

A hearing has been scheduled for Monday in Indianapolis before Swygert on the contempt action, Truman's letter.

Following is the text of President Truman's letter to Findling: "Dear Mr. Findling: I read your letter of August 19 regarding the meeting in Senator Taft's office with the publishers and the Chicago newspapermen with a lot of interest.

"Improper for Senator"

"It seems to me that it is entirely improper for any Senator, no matter what his politics or his rank in the Senate may be, to attempt to put the heat on one of the executive departments.

"In my conference with the National Labor Relations Board on its organization, I informed the members of that board and the counsel that they constituted a part of the executive branch of the Government, and since the Chief Executive did not expect to interfere in their internal affairs, he expected that they would be immune to pressure from the legislative branch of the Government.

"I sincerely hope that the counselors of the National Labor Relations Board will bear this in mind."

Rep. Peden, Loser At Polls, Disowns 'Bachelor' Claim

Altus, Okla., Sept. 14 (U.P.)—Representative Preston Peden (D., Okla.) who posed as a bachelor in his unsuccessful campaign for re-nomination, disclosed today he married a German nurse in Bavaria in 1945.

Peden said he misrepresented his marital status on entering politics because he was unable to bring his wife, the former Ursula Wendt of Munich, to Oklahoma. Shortly after his election, however, he was able to obtain passage for his wife and son. He lived with them from that time on at Falls Church, Va.

Peden met Miss Wendt in Starnberg, Bavaria, while he was a judge and prosecutor in the allied military courts. She was a nurse and "one of the few German girls in the zone who spoke English." They were married on Christmas Eve, 1945.

Peden was defeated in the primary by Victor Wickersham, whom he ousted in the 1946 elections.

STREET FIGHT—Tear gas, laid down by police at Richmond, Calif., sends strikers and spectators running during a phase of the two-hour battle between the cops and strikers yesterday at the Standard Oil Co. refinery. Non-strikers going through picket line started tiff.

First Violence

San Francisco, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—An angry crowd of 3000 CIO strikers and strike sympathizers fought a two-hour rock and tear gas battle with police today around a Richmond strike-picketed oil refinery.

When it was over with 12 persons injured and tempers still high, law enforcement officers pondered a request to have the National Guard called out. It was the first major violence of California's 11-day oil refinery strike over wages.

More trouble was feared by police tomorrow when AFL maintenance workers again appear to pass through the CIO picket lines at Richmond's Standard Oil Co. refinery.

Slip Through Rear Gate About 300 AFL and independent unionists made it into the plant today by slipping through a rear gate while the riot centered on other cars driven up to the main gate as a decoy.

The 12 injured, all with minor hurts, included two policemen and a State highway patrolman.

Three news cameras were smashed and some photographers were manhandled.

The roaring fight raged down Standard ave. in front of the Richmond plant and on adjoining streets. The rioters hastily set up barricades. The 105 police, freely using tear gas guns and bombs, tried vainly to enforce a court order against more than four pickets to a gate.

Rocks Whirl Through Air Rocks as large as five pounds were whirling through the air. Strikers picked up police tear gas bombs and hurled them back. The windshield of one police car was caved in by rocks.

Strong, Associated Press photographer, whose car window was smashed, and his camera damaged, said the police officers and 25 sheriff's deputies were overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers.

Striking CIO oil workers and their sympathizers held an open air mass meeting after the rioting. Then they demonstrated peacefully before the hall of the Independent International Union of Machinists as a warning against further par-

U. S. Funds Sought to Erect Gallinger Children's Building

The District is preparing to ask for Federal funds to help build a combined pediatrics and crippled children's building at Gallinger Hospital, it was learned last night.

A grant of $600,000 to $700,000 will be requested from Hill-Burton Act funds available to the District on a matching basis, with the District putting up $2 for every $1 of Federal funds. District Health Officer George C. Ruhland has started preparing justifications for the fund request.

Present plans under consideration at the District Building call for earmarking present and future funds accumulated under the Hill-Burton Act for Gallinger and Children's Hospital. District Budget Officer Walter Fowler revealed.

Economic Threat Hoover Holds Lower Taxes Vital to U. S.

By Stanley Carroll Post Reporter

Grave warning that governmental machinery must be overhauled drastically to pave the way for lower taxes and avert a halt in social and economic advancement in the United States was sounded yesterday by former President Herbert Hoover.

Addressing a luncheon of the National Press Club—his first appearance before the club in 18 years—Mr. Hoover confined himself to the work of the Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, of which he is chairman.

He stressed particularly these points: Many new Federal projects, worthwhile as they may be, must be deferred until the overburdened tax situation is corrected.

Recommendations to be made by the commission will call for a sharp reduction in routine functions of the President to permit him to concentrate on major problems of national and international importance.

More "working Vice Presidents"—which means more Cabinet members—will be required to relieve the present load imposed on the White House.

Attired in a dark grey double-breasted suit, soft white shirt and striped tie, the former President bowed and smiled as he arose to face a standing ovation. But the

1 in 10 Workers Is on Payroll Of Government

More than 1 out of every 10 working persons in this country is employed by Government—Federal, State or local.

Census Bureau figures show 5,900,000 persons on public payrolls in April, latest month for which data are available, out of a total of 58,330,000 persons employed throughout the Nation.

While the number of public workers was well below the 8,800,000 wartime peak of April, 1945, increased pay rates sent the public payroll total for last April to $1,228,500,000—the highest in history.

Public payrolls accounted for well over one tenth of all wage and salary payments in April, which Commerce Department estimates place at about $10,400,000,000. Individual incomes from all sources that month were about $17,300,000,000.

C. B. Porter Leaps to Death; Ex-Treasurer, Times-Herald

Former Executive Ends Life at Hotel In Clarksburg, W. Va.

Charles Bell Porter, 52, former treasurer of the Washington Times-Herald, was killed at Clarksburg, W. Va., yesterday when he plunged from a sixth floor hotel room.

Clarksburg police identified Porter through a will and other personal papers found in his room. City Detective Chief S. E. Barnett termed the death a suicide.

Before he left the employ of the Times-Herald in the spring of 1947, Porter had handled all financial affairs of the late Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, owner and publisher of the newspaper, who died in July.

In a will dated June 21, 1946, Porter was one of eight employees named by Mrs. Patterson to share the Times-Herald upon her death. However, in a codicil dated May 20, 1947, Porter's name was expunged and his place as beneficiary, trustee and executor taken by Rudolph H. Yeatman, Sr.

However, Yeatman died before Mrs. Patterson, so under the terms of the will ownership of the Times-Herald passed to seven of its current executives.

Countess Felicia Gizeyka, daughter of the will, filed notice in District Court Monday she will contest terms of the will.

India Claims Key Cities in Hyderabad

Predicts Junction Of Invasion Wings In 6 Days; Checkers, Defenders Assert

New Delhi, India, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—Indian troops racing into Hyderabad from the west today captured Rajasur, a half way point on the invasion route 85 miles from the capital of the princely state.

This was announced by the Indian Defense Ministry, which reported also the fall of Suriapet, a road town lying 78 miles from Hyderabad City on the east.

Indian Southern Command headquarters said it expected the converging Indian forces moving from the Rajasur area in the west and the Suriapet area in the east to effect a junction in six days. It said the columns now were about 150 miles apart.

Indian Bomber Over City (The Hyderabad radio said one Indian bomber made several flights over the city of Hyderabad. Air raid sirens were sounded, but no bombs were dropped, the broadcast said.)

(The United Nations Security Council announced in Paris that it would meet at 3 p. m. Thursday to consider Hyderabad's request for U. N. intervention to stop the march of Indian troops. The request was made on the eve of Monday's invasion.)

(A communique of the Hyderabad Defense Ministry issued in Pakistan said the Indian troops suffered 1000 casualties on the first day of the invasion. It reported that at least one village had been retaken and said that the deepest penetration of Hyderabad at any point was only 10 miles.

Advances Claimed Checked (The Hyderabad radio said late tonight Indian troops were pressing hard on the northern and western sectors, but advances were being checked. Hyderabad troops destroyed one Indian tank and several armored cars, the radio said, and recaptured one village on the south. Indian rocket-firing fighter planes were strafing roads and bridges in Hyderabad.)

The Indian Defense Ministry reported, also, the capture of the important rail town of Jalna after about 15 miles north of Hyderabad. A train carrying two coaches of occupation personnel to Seoul from Pusan was rammed from the rear by a train en route to Seoul from Mokpo.

Some of the soldiers were on the initial stage of their return trip to the United States. Others were returning to duty from furloughs in Japan.

The number of casualties was reported by Army physicians, who rushed to the scene aboard a hospital train. Twenty bodies were removed from the twisted wreckage and brought to Seoul along with 16 of the injured.

However, some of the uninjured passengers—arriving here late—questioned the death figure. They said that, although the wreckage had not been cleared, they believed there were not more than 10 American dead.

At least two Koreans were killed. Names of the victims were withheld pending notification of relatives.

One passenger, M. E. Penry of Flushing, N. Y., said the impact of the crash was so great that it was feared the train would have derailed.

New York, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—Ground was broken on a rubble-strewn lot on Manhattan's East Side today for what eventually will be the 65-million-dollar skyscraper, headquarters of the United Nations.

With a gathering of only about 250 persons on hand, Benjamin Cohen, acting secretary-general of the U. N., plunged a shovel into the dirt and dug out the first spadeful of what will be the base of seven square blocks of modernistic buildings.

Then a power shovel took over in earnest the job of scooping out the foundation for the U. N. headquarters on one of the most expensive pieces of real estate in the city, donated by the John D. Rockefeller family.

The U. N. expects to have the first buildings completed in 1950.

Italian Colonies Issue Goes To U. N. as Big 4 Fail to Agree

Paris (Wednesday), Sept. 15 (U.P.)—Representatives of the Big Four powers were unable to reach an agreement today on the future of Italy's prewar African colonies and decided to turn the problem over to the United Nations General Assembly.

American, British, French and Russian delegates recessed their meeting at 3 a. m. after arguing through the night over procedural matters, the validity of the meeting and how the U. N. should be notified and what sort of communication should be issued on the sessions. The delegates had until noon today to reach an agreement.

The four delegates ordered a meeting of their experts for 10 a. m. today to try to draft a letter to the U. N. advising it of their failure.

Andre Vishinsky, Russian deputy foreign minister, earlier had proposed a solution which the United States first suggested in 1946 and the Soviet Union rejected.

This would put the territories of Libya, Eritrea and Somaliland under United Nations trusteeship, with the administering power made up of a special council consisting of the Big Four powers, Italy, and two representatives of the native inhabitants. Until now the Russians have urged Italy as the administering power.

But just as Vichinsky M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister, objected to the Russian proposal, the

Gen. Clay Predicts Long Siege But Sees No War Over Berlin

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.

Berlin, Sept. 14 (NYHT).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American military governor, today predicted a long siege of Berlin accompanied by a sharp winter expansion of the number of aircraft supplying the blockaded city, but foresaw no war over Berlin in the immediate future.

"I certainly don't believe war is around the corner," the general said. In support of this position he added that the recent reductions in the number of American women and children in Berlin had been caused by the transfer of certain activities of military government from Berlin to the American zone of Germany. There was no plan whatsoever, he said, to move out the 1000 American dependents who still remain in Berlin.

Despite his confidence that the "cold war" is not the immediate prelude to a shooting conflict between the east and west, General Clay's 90-minute interview with visiting newspapermen today left an impression of little hope for an early agreement with the Soviet Union on Berlin or other issues.

At the same time he disclosed plans for continuing the air lift into an indefinite future. He indicated that he did not believe the Russians, even with bad weather in the offing, could interfere with the provisioning of Berlin by air.

The air lift, currently totalling more than 4500 tons of coal and food to Berlin daily, has by no means reached its maximum possibilities, the general said. An increase of about 40 C-54 four-engine Douglas aircraft—roughly 40 more—would be needed.

Korean Trains Crash, 40 U. S. Soldiers Die

60 Hurt as Engine Rams Into Rear of Coaches Halted by Breakdown

Seoul (Wednesday), Sept. 15 (U.P.)—The Army reported today 40 American soldiers were killed and about 60 injured when their train was rammed by another 75 miles south of Seoul last night.

The wreck occurred in United States-occupied South Korea. About 15 miles north of Taejeon, a train carrying two coaches of occupation personnel to Seoul from Pusan was rammed from the rear by a train en route to Seoul from Mokpo.

Some of the soldiers were on the initial stage of their return trip to the United States. Others were returning to duty from furloughs in Japan.

Thomas Declares 'Most Flagrant' Nelson's Refusal To Answer Group

By Mary Spargo Post Reporter

Contempt of Congress proceedings against Steve Nelson, veteran Communist Party organizer, were initiated yesterday by a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities in connection with its current inquiry into Russian espionage in this country's atomic bomb secrets.

The subcommittee voted to start moving toward bringing contempt charges after Nelson, now chairman of the Western Pennsylvania District of the Communist Party, declined to answer questions at an executive session of the subcommittee.

Chairman J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.), chairman of the full committee said: "This is probably the most flagrant example of contempt that we have witnessed since we've been on this committee."

The committee also said it was considering contempt citations against J. V. Peters, mysterious head of the Communist Party underground, and against William Rosen and Maurice Braverman, a Baltimore attorney. Rosen and Braverman were concerned in testimony having to do with Alger Hiss, former top-ranking policy making official in the State Department, who is now head of the Carnegie Endowment for World Peace. Chambers had testified that Hiss was a member of a group of elite Communists dedicated to influencing the policies of the American Government.

Nelson told reporters after the committee session that the investigators were "political pyromaniacs," and that he refused to answer many questions on grounds of self-incrimination, or some other constitutional basis.

He said the committee was anxious "to connect me up with this."

De Gaulle to Poll Voters in Effort To Force Election

Paris, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle increased pressure on the French government tonight by disclosing he is going to poll the people directly on whether they want general elections.

An aide to De Gaulle said the unique one-man referendum would be aimed also at obtaining funds for De Gaulle's French People's Party (RPF).

The campaign will involve the sale of a 50-franc (13-cent) sticker. In the National Assembly the new cabinet of Premier Henri Queuille survived its first test by a vote of 335 to 228. The vote was on postponement of a Communist request for debate on the government's political make-up.

The new cabinet was drawing up a series of financial and economic measures expected to involve prices, rail fares and stamps.

Nizam's Ideas of Money Might Serve Purpose Here, But With Amendment

American Presidents, faced with an annual reception sore-hand season, might well adopt the profitable practice of the Nizam of Hyderabad. All subjects paying a call on this Indian potentate must cough up a fee, which the Nizam promptly collects on the spot, at the end of the reception line.

This quaint Oriental custom, if and he drives around in an ancient Ford. He prefers composing poetry in Persian to following the races. And as to the ladies, the Nizam is strictly a family man who has no eye or time for the hour-glass, and keeps romance within the confines of his harem. This little man is said to be the father of 100 children, more or less, but as with his rupees, there's been no recent count.

Osman's mother was a Hindu dancing girl. Osman worshiped her while she lived, and pays daily homage to her tomb. The reticent ruler in 1911 at the age of 25, like his illustrious predecessors, he has been a "Faithfully Ally" of the "paramount" British Crown. When Great Britain pulled out of India in 1947, the Nizam carried on as an independent country, although Hyderabad was an island in the heartland of India.

Benevolent Despot
Even under the British, though the Nizam was a power to be reckoned with—having his own army, railroads, taxes, and the like. He ruled as a benevolent despot, putting in a long day's work in his desire to make most decisions himself. He's smart, sensitive and considerate. He's okayed but two executions. Legends of the Nizam's riches are matched only by the stories of his penny-pinching idiosyncrasies. The Nizam loves to have jewel around, sarkfuls of the precious stuff, piled in and around his palaces, yet he's indifferent to all this treasure. Once, it's said, he sent a lackey out to guard a newly arrived truck full of bullion. That was years ago, and the truck bullion, and guard are still standing out there.

Osman himself abstains from glitter, except for formal occasions. He wears his clothes until they become unrepairable. For years he treasured a pair of shoes on a cracked leather rather than buy a new one. He considered such a venture an extravagance. And with all the palaces at his command, the parsimonious potentate sets up home and office on the veranda of a ramshackle building of his capital city.

Lone luxury that the Nizam permits himself is cream. He goes for cream in every form, particularly stewed fruit with whipped cream. Osman's obsession for hoarding coin is a source of proud amusement among his subjects, and the Nizam is human enough to enjoy the jokes himself. His favorite gag about himself deals with two of his courtiers.

"I've an urgent message for His Exalted Highness," declared the first courtier, "but he's asleep and I dare not wake him."

"Have no fear," advised the second courtier. "Just click two coins together and His Exalted Highness will wake up by himself."

The police said that if Callas catches the thugs before the police catch him, murder will surely be done.

Maharajah of Jaipur, Wife In Washington for Holiday

ARRIVALS—The Maharajah and Maharani of Jaipur

The tall, handsome Maharajah of Jaipur, ruler of three million people in north central India, arrived at National Airport from New York yesterday, and said in crisp British accents that he was here just for "a holiday."

The 38-year-old monarch, whose name is Sayaj Mansingh, whose wife is Sayaj Devi, younger sister of the Maharajah of Cochin Behar. The Maharajah, noted for his polo playing in prewar England, and a captain in the British Life Guards in World War II, is seeing the United States for the first time.

Modern Army
Jaipur has a modern army of about 10,000, from which it furnishes its quota of troops to the Indian government for use in the national defense. One Jaipur regiment has been fighting for the past year in Kashmir, says the Maharajah, against Pakistan invaders of the state.

Progressive Ruler
"One of the most progressive rulers in India," according to his hostess, Mme. Benegal Rama Rau, wife of the Indian Ambassador, the Maharajah saw to it that his state joined the Indian Union shortly after India became independent in August, 1947.

"We felt it in the best interest of the country," he said yesterday. The Maharajah has actively governed Jaipur since he came of age in 1931, and thinks the toughest problem India faces today is administration—"getting the whole country properly organized."

Jaipur itself is a constitutional monarchy, he points out, and has

Boys' Clubs Support Sought
A proposal that Prince Georges County commissioners provide funds for operation of the Prince Georges Boys Clubs was made yesterday at the commissioners' meeting in Upper Marlboro.

The proposal came from Louis B. Arnold, attorney and past president of the boys' clubs, who also urged funds for an all-round county recreational program. Pointing out that the boys' clubs fell short in their funds campaign this year, Arnold, in a letter, told the commissioners the 30 clubs include more than 3000 county youngsters.

William A. Carson, president of the board of commissioners, said funds are not available at this time for such a program. The commissioners decided to attend two hearings set for the same time today through an error. They will go to Hyattsville at 10 a. m. for zoning hearings and then hurry to Upper Marlboro for hearings on new assessments in Kent Election District.

The commissioners announced they will not hold a meeting October 12 and that any business set for that date will be conducted on the following day, October 12 is Columbus Day, a holiday in Maryland. The county school board also will hold its meeting on October 13 instead of October 12.

U. S. Exports To Red Bloc Hit New Low

United States shipments to Communist-controlled Europe dipped to a postwar low of $3,400,000 in July, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Meanwhile, exports under the foreign recovery program rose $8,500,000 in July to a total of $363,200,000, including both relief and nonrelief goods. The Marshall Plan shipments go to countries outside the Soviet sphere.

Exports to Russia and 10 of her satellites, including Marshall Tito Yugoslavia, were down $100,000 from June. However, shipments to Russia alone rebounded from the unprecedented low of under $30,000 in June to $400,000 in July.

Russia, on the other hand shipped $5,700,000 in goods to this country in July, including some manganese and chrome vital to American steel makers.

Meanwhile, authorizations for European recovery hit a new daily high for the second time this week with approval yesterday of $64,971,059 to seven participating nations.

Total funds authorized by the Economic Cooperation Administration to all countries now stand at $1,560,232, 616.

An allotment of $53,841,602 was approved for purchase of United States wheat for Austria, the French zone of Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Norway. Italy received $21,081,017 and Austria $10,060,180 for United States wheat.

Another $10,290,390 goes to Bizonal Germany, including seven million dollars for tobacco. American sources will furnish three million dollars' worth of tobacco and four million dollars' worth will be purchased from Turkey and Greece.

Politics Holding Up Recovery, Magnate Says
New York, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—European officials "playing politics with ECA funds" are holding up the whole European Recovery Program, Alexander G. Bryant, president of the National Tool Builders Association, said today.

Local politicians in the 16 Marshall Plan nations are earmarking ECA dollars for relief purchases and holding up "more than 150 million dollars in orders for machine tools which would enable these countries to get into production themselves," Bryant said at a news conference on his return from a European trip.

The United States has accused Romania of violating its peace treaty with the Allies.

It said this former enemy nation is discriminating against American interests in Romania, in favor of Russian interests.

The State Department made public yesterday a note sent to the Bucharest government September 7. It protested against a Romanian law calling for nationalization of industrial, banking, insurance, mining, transportation and other enterprises. The note was delivered to Romanian officials by American Minister Rudolf Schoenfeld.

Compensation Asked
The United States said the Romanian law is not only "discriminatory," but also fails to provide adequate compensation for American owners of nationalized property.

In view of the nature of the Romanian legislation, and its application to American properties," the note said, "the United States Government must therefore reserve all rights on behalf of its nationals with respect to the seizures of their properties by the Romanian government, and intends to hold the Romanian government responsible for the return of the property or prompt payment of adequate and effective compensation therefore."

Russia Favored
The note reminded the Romanians that their law exempts from nationalization enterprises "formed on the basis of a 'special convention' between the Romanian government and a foreign government—meaning Russia. It does business. It said this means it emphasized that the Romanian Soviet interests should not be peace treaty provided for "most favored nation" treatment by Ro- of the United States.

Berlin Battle Lost by Reds, Official Says

Berlin, Sept. 14 (AP)—A veteran American military government official declared today Russia and communists have lost the political battle for Berlin. As a last resort, he said, they have taken to rioting and force.

The official, Louis Glaser of Washington, D. C., and Brookline, Mass., is retiring as chief of the Civil Administration and Political Affairs branch, Office of Military Government for Berlin.

Glaser leaves Wednesday for the United States after serving in Berlin since the beginning of the joint occupation in July, 1945. He told newsmen three years of "daily shirt sleeve negotiations" with the Russians had been tough, but confidently asserted:

"The Russians and communists have proved themselves morally, ethically and ideologically bankrupt in Berlin."

"The proof of this lies in recent events," he said. "They now have descended to rioting and resorted to force against democratic procedures to seize control which they could never gain otherwise."

Glaser said the battle for Berlin was not yet over, but he asserted:

"Now the issue is plain and the lines are drawn for all the world to see."

London, Sept. 14 (AP)—The grave state of the world has forced Great Britain to delay demobilization, step up recruiting, improve civilian defenses and double the output of fighter planes, Herbert Morrison, Lord President of the Council, told a startled Commons today.

Speaking for Prime Minister Attlee, who is ill, Morrison said the government had "no choice but to take certain precautionary measures." But, he added, there was no cause for panic.

Morrison said all servicemen would be held three months beyond their scheduled release dates, which will add 80,000 men to the planned strength of the armed forces at year's end. Conscription will serve 15 months instead of 12.

In addition to these measures, a stepped-up recruiting campaign will be aimed at bringing the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force volunteer reserves to full strength. Simultaneously, Britain will detail additional manpower to overhaul wartime equipment, expand the armed forces supply system, and recondition old types of fighter planes, Morrison added.

Official figures showed that Britain's armed forces had fallen to 816,000 from its wartime high at the end of July with a rate of release of 30,000 men monthly.

Morrison's announcement to the House came after Conservative Party leaders attacked the government for calling a special session of Parliament to consider curbing the powers of House of Lords at a time when Britain and the world were in grave straits.

King George opened the session with a 74-word speech. As the King and Queen arrived at Parliament, a 41-gun salute was fired and thousands cheered.

U. S. Would Let Somaliland Go to Italy

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.

Italy would get a trusteeship over Italian Somaliland if the United States had its way, the State Department disclosed yesterday.

This hot and barren desert along the Indian Ocean coast is economically and strategically the least valuable of Italy's three former colonies. It is being administered by the British, who conquered it in the war.

As for the other two colonies, the United States would divide each of them. The southern half of Eritrea, near the southern exit of the Red Sea, would be ceded to neighboring Ethiopia, which would thus get its first outlet to sea at the little Port of Assab.

The eastern half of Libya, adjoining Egypt on the Mediterranean would be put under British trusteeship, in accordance with a British pledge to its Arab chief, that they would not be put back under Italian rule.

The final disposition of the northern half of Eritrea and western Libya, otherwise known as Tripolitania, would be postponed for a year in the hope of reaching agreement on their future. But in the meantime, the United States has proposed, the Italians who formerly lived in these areas should be allowed to return to their homes.

Yesterday was the first official announcement of what Secretary Marshall last week described as a bipartisan American policy for dealing with Italy's former colonies. The Secretary implied it had been worked out in consultation with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, who earlier in the summer had advocated giving the Italian people "the opportunity to take part in future development of these African areas."

per cent of the 105 C-54's currently being used on the Berlin run—would enable the air lift to operate on a scale that would maintain the 4500-ton daily average through the bad weather of the winter months.

Expansion of airport facilities is proceeding on a long-range scale.

There was a 34-day supply of food when the blockade was imposed by the Russians; today there is a 33-day supply on hand in the western zones of Berlin.

In response to a question as to why no attempt was made to break the Russian blockade at the outset by attempting to run a convoy of trucks through to Berlin, General Clay said:

"If we had attempted to force the corridors, we would have committed an act of aggression. An armed convoy forcing the border of the Soviet zone might have resulted in a very nasty incident before we had exhausted all peaceful means of lifting the blockade."

General Clay declared he saw no need to increase American military forces in Germany. He said the force is adequate for the job it is required to do: Namely, the occupation of the American zone of western Germany.

Meanwhile, Berlin Communists tonight announced refusal to participate in the municipal elections scheduled for November 14. Simultaneously, the official American German-language newspaper charged the Communists "plan a coup d'etat here" by October 15.

The Communists based their refusal to participate on the fact that the election decision had been taken by the three non-Communist parties at "an illegal meeting held in the British sector."

The Communists maintain that legal meetings of the municipal assembly can be held only in the city hall, located in the Soviet sector.

Anti-Communists held demonstrations to protest the sentences of 25 years at hard labor imposed yesterday by attacking Russian soldiers and the Red flag in riots following last Thursday's anti-Communist rally here.

Russians Return Airlift Flier After Bail-Out

Frankfurt (Wednesday), Sept. 15 (AP)—Russian authorities returned to the American zone today one of the two American airlift fliers who parachuted over the Soviet zone yesterday. The Air Force identified him only as Captain Flacker.

The Air Force said it had received information that the other flier, whose name was not given, also was safe. It was understood the Russians would take the second flier from Weimer to Berlin today.

jected to the idea when it was advanced two years ago by James F. Byrnes, then American Secretary of State, so did all three Western states shy away from it yesterday.

"If a baby has seven nurses, you cannot expect it to grow up," was Molotov's comment in those days. He was referring to the fact there would be seven members on the administering council for each area.

In a similar manner the United States, Great Britain and France showed a remarkable lack of enthusiasm now that the American plan has become a Vishinsky plan.

At yesterday's four-power conference to study the disposition of the colonies, Hector McNeil, British Minister of State, said his government had never liked the idea. He wondered what countries or organization would pay the annual deficits in these colonies, which and Bethlehem.

since the war have been under British military occupation.

Maurice Couve de Murville, the French delegate, said his country always had considered the scheme impractical. Lewis W. Douglas, American Ambassador to the Court of St. James's maintained an understandable silence because American policy has changed in the past two years.

Peace Demonstrations Flare Over Middle East

Haifa, Palestine, Sept. 14 (AP)—Communist-inspired peace demonstrations have flared up in Palestine and in Arab refugee camps all over the Middle East, United Nations officials reported tonight.

They said the demonstrations had forced Arab authorities to declare martial law at Nablus and to make mass arrests in Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

sent one car "right through the one ahead—riding through at the level of the seat tops."

Penry, custodian for the Korean National Land Administration, was among 30 passengers in the rear coach of the Pusan train. He said that when he saw the other train bearing down on them, he shouted a warning. The train in which he was riding had stopped at the village of Nappin a few minutes earlier.

Penry said that whole other passengers cleared out of the coach quickly; he ran forward waving a small pocket flashlight in an attempt to warn the soldiers in the coaches ahead. Then he jumped from the right of way into a rice paddy when the other train struck.

"I've got to hand it to an M. P. who was giving a warning from the other side of the train," Penry said. "He jumped onto one of the soldier cars and got caught in the vestibule when the crash came."

An Army hospital car from Taejeon reached the scene about an hour after the wreck, which occurred about 7:30 p. m. Medical attendants said they found an Army physician—one of the train's passengers—already had organized an emergency aid team.

Penry said the train had made an unscheduled stop at Nappin evidently because of mechanical difficulty. He added that the Mokpo train did not appear to slacken its speed as it approached.

$500 Reward Offered in Police Death

The Alexandria City Council last night offered a $500 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the man who murdered Police Officer Robert B. Harris early last Saturday morning.

On the recommendation of its finance committee, the council also authorized payment to Mrs. Harris of her husband's salary for the remainder of this year. The sum will be around $800.

Alexandria police, meanwhile, questioned 13 more suspects in the slaying, making more than 40 in all to have been questioned so far. Detective Inspector Russell A. Hawes, however, said police still have no leads.

The State Department said yesterday that Dr. Laszlo Radvanyi, director of the Mexican Institute of Public Opinion, is barred by terms of the 1918 Immigration Act from entering the United States.

The executive council of the World Congress of Public Opinion Research, meeting at Eagles Mere, Pa., protested Monday against the denial of a passport visa permitting Dr. Radvanyi to attend.

Betty Hynes, Society Editor Of Times-Herald, Found Dead

Miss Elizabeth Kenney (Betty) Hynes, 50, Times-Herald society editor, was found dead yesterday in the bathroom of her Georgetown home, 1217 35th st. nw.

The body, clad in short pajamas, was discovered about 11:15 a. m. by a maid, Mrs. Maggie Jones, of 2205 L st. nw., who summoned police. Homicide detectives found a partially empty vial of sleeping tablets on a shelf nearby.

ELIZABETH KENNEY
(BETTY) HYNES

An autopsy, performed later by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, coroner, will not be complete until a chemical analysis of her blood is made. This will take at least a week. Dr. MacDonald said Miss Hynes had apparently been dead several hours when the body was found.

Dr. MacDonald released the body for burial, pending a temporary certificate of heart failure, pending completion of tests.

Walter Kenney, 52, Miss Hynes' brother, said she had been depressed because her late employer, Mrs. Eleanor M. (Cissie) Patterson, owner of the Times-Herald, until her death, failed to keep a promise to "clear the mortgage" on her home.

Miss Hynes went unmentioned in Mrs. Patterson's will made public July 29—five days after her death.

Kenney said that his sister purchased the two-story, white brick dwelling, located on a steep hill, less than a block from Key Bridge, about two years ago. That's when he came to live with her, he said.

According to Times-Herald records, Miss Hynes met Mrs. Patterson in New York, where the former had been working as social secretary for a succession of prominent women. She came to Washington with Mrs. Patterson in 1930, when the latter became editor of the Washington Herald, and several years later became a general assignments reporter.

Miss Hynes transferred from the local staff to the society department and in 1934 became drama editor. Three years later she returned to the city staff and in 1939 she went back to the society department.

In 1942, Miss Hynes was made society editor. Three years later she resumed the drama editorship. The following year, however, she was assigned to write a social column. In January, 1947, she was again made society editor.

Precinct Detective Lionel Couture told reporters a partially empty bottle of sleeping tablets, as prescribed by Dr. J. J. McHale, was found. He said the prescription, issued September 3, called for 50 tablets; to be taken one a day; there were five remaining, he reported.

Intimates said Miss Hynes had been in a highly nervous state and last year was treated at a sanitarium. Dr. McHale had been giving her vitamin B shots.

The maid said Miss Hynes "couldn't sleep at night" and was in the habit of taking "one or two pills."

Miss Hynes was on vacation for a week and had planned to go down to White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for a few days rest—but changed her mind "because she didn't feel she wanted to go by herself," the maid told reporters. She'd remained at home and was due to return to work Thursday.

Kenney revealed that Miss Hynes was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. James J. Hynes of Ossining, N. Y., her birthplace, after her own parents died. She was graduated from Ossining High School and attended Columbia and New York Universities.

Kenney said he'd been away from home for several days and was not there when the body was discovered. Miss Hynes was pronounced dead by Dr. Melvin Alper, of Emergency Hospital.

3 UNESCO Delegates Appointed by Truman

executrix. The will was dated September 10, 1948.

Police at Clarksburg said Porter's body landed in the street at about 4:40 p. m., a few feet from the curb after narrowly missing a hotel awning and jewelry store sign.

Harrison County Coroner Dr. Kenna Jackson, who issued a formal verdict of suicide, said Porter died instantly.

Detective Chief Barnett said Porter had registered at the hotel last Thursday and requested a change of room the following day. The first room was two floors above the office.

Barnett reported the man's belongings were neatly packed in four bags and that a wrist watch, billfold containing $77, a coin purse and sun glasses were on the bureau. A screen in a window through which Porter plunged was broken, Barnett added.

Porter, who was a bachelor and had no relatives in this country, was a native of Edinburgh, Scotland. He lived at the Kennedy-Warren apartments.

He obtained a Ph.D. degree at the University of Edinburgh and served with a Scottish regiment in Greece during the First World War.

He came to the United States in October, 1929, and joined the New York accounting firm of Arthur Young & Co.

In 1931, while associated with the firm, he was assigned to work on the books of Mrs. Patterson. In this connection he made frequent trips here. In 1937, he accepted Mrs. Patterson's offer of the position as treasurer of the Times-Herald.

Except for several brief intervals, he remained at this post until he left the Times-Herald in the spring of 1947.

Dewey Indorses 'Notice to World'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 14.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey today reinforced bipartisan unity in the Berlin crisis by calling for an America "So strong that no aggressive power will ever be misled into attacking us on the assumption that our Democracy is too weak or too glibly to protect itself."

Proclaiming September 18 "Air Force Day" in New York, Governor Dewey said this country is again on guard and "we propose to make and keep America strong."

His proclamation, recognizing a highly trained military as the best insurance against war, added teeth to the Republican high command's "notice to the world" last Friday that America is politically united against aggression.

It came as only two questions hung over the type of campaign Governor Dewey will conduct when he heads for Des Moines on his opening transcontinental campaign tour on Sunday:

Two Questions

1. How will the extremely critical situation in Europe affect his treatment of foreign policy issues? In what was planned as a "free and unfettered" campaign, in contrast to the 1944 wartime handicaps?

2. How will he guard against runaway GOP overconfidence in a November slide, given a further shot in the arm yesterday by the record Republican sweep of every top office in Maine?

The first question was partially answered by the Vandenberg-Dewey-Dewey bipartisan foreign policy statement last week, with more light thrown upon it by the Governor's "Air Force Day" proclamation today.

Today's State proclamation referred only by implication to the taut Berlin situation.

Everything Possible

"We propose to do everything within the compass of human ability to avoid another war, everything compatible with our national safety and the preservation of freedom," Governor Dewey said. But he added:

"We intend to have an establishment of highly trained military personnel which will be ready for any emergency, as the best available insurance against war."

In such an establishment, Dewey said the Air Force "must have an increasingly powerful part."

On the forty-first anniversary of United States military aviation (Sept. 18) and the first anniversary of the new Department of the Air Force, he said everything possible should be done to make clear that "air power has become our first line of defense."

Sends Congratulations

As the GOP Maine sweep rolled to new records Governor Dewey sent congratulations to Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith, elected Senator; Frederick G. Payne, elected Governor, and all the other members of the Maine ticket.

But both the Governor, and his advisory staff, fearful of a campaign letup in close State Senate race and nationally as well, refused to crow about it. Instead they dug in the spurs for more party activity all around the country.

The Governor's own Western trip plans best illustrated this strategy. More and more rear-platform addresses were being added to his itinerary, particularly in States where Republicans think they have a chance to grab off a Democratic Senate seat. In some of these States, one aide revealed, the Governor will go in for "barnstorming." All Republican visitors at the State Capitol are being advised to turn on the campaign heat without any relaxation.

Whistle Stops, Too

Dewey's major policy speeches, usually reserved for large metropolitan centers, may be delivered this time in some surprisingly out-of-the-way places as well as in the big cities, especially where the impact will help swing a Senate seat.

The Governor worked nearly all day on his speeches. Only the first, his opening, cover-all Des Moines, Iowa, effort, is now in final form. The others are in outline or in the first or second draft stage.

He took time out from speech-making, however, to see Mrs. Oreta Culp Hobby, executive president of the Houston (Tex.) Post and wartime commander of the WAC.

Mrs. Hobby later told newsmen she urged the Governor to support return of control over oil-rich coastal tidelands to the States. She said Governor Dewey expressed "sympathy" with the proposal. Coastal State Republicans had the plank written into the Republican platform.

Shannon Renominated By Conn. Republicans

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 14 (AP).—Gov. James C. Shannon was renominated by acclamation at the Republican State convention here today.

Shannon's Democratic rival in November will be Chester Bowles, former director of the Office of Price Administration.

Atom Scientist Quits Lab Post

DR. PHILIP M. MORSE, who quit as director of the Brookhaven National Laboratory, yesterday described as "exaggerated" a New York newspaper story saying he left the position because of "irresponsible smears" of scientists by the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Morse said he had been director of the atomic energy project two years and that he would resume his Massachusetts Institute of Technology professorship when the fall term starts. He acknowledged, however, that he told the New York Star that activities of the committee "had not made my job any easier."

Truman Foresees Victory if Vote's Square

By The Associated Press

President Truman good-naturedly told a gathering of United States district attorneys yesterday that if they protect the people from coercion, there will be a Democratic victory in November.

Mr. Truman was referring to the Hatch Act, designed to safeguard elections. He said: "If you'll properly enforce those criminal statutes and people are not coerced, we will have an election, come November 2, which will leave the people who are for the people as renters in the White House for another four years."

Under the Hatch Act, district attorneys may not take part actively in presidential campaigns. As for that, Mr. Truman said: "Of course, we have the Hatch Act. It might be called the 'Hatchet Act'."

"I think that a person who holds a public office and who is frankly a politician is just as good a citizen as some of the people who live in their ivory towers and throw bricks at them."

The President said that as a Senator he had voted against repeal of the act. He said he thought it had to some extent "limited the freedom of action of American citizens."

Mr. Truman's brief, informal talk was in the White House rose garden. Attorney General Tom Clark previously had told the group that even with the Hatch Act on the law books, "a lot of things can be done and you can rest assured they will be done" by the district attorneys in support of Mr. Truman's campaign.

The district attorneys are holding a conference here. Mr. Truman asked the district attorneys to see that "the Bill of Rights is not violated in your district."

To Stump New York

Paul A. Fitzgerald, New York State Democratic chairman, said yesterday President Truman is planning two trips in an extensive stumping tour of New York State. Fitzgerald made the announcement after a White House call.

He told newsmen he had recommended that Mr. Truman speak in Buffalo, Albany, Syracuse and Rochester, among other cities, about the middle of October. This trip would include platform appearances at other points. He said he had suggested a second trip to New York City about October 28.

Fitzpatrick said the plan is for Mr. Truman to make at least three speeches in New York City near the end of October—in Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens, and possibly other boroughs.

"We are going to carry New York State," he predicted. He said that Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate for

Israel Calls U. N. Truce 'Act of War'

Tel Aviv, Sept. 14 (NYHT).—Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion of Israel today asserted that the United Nations truce was an act of war designed to break the will of the new Jewish state.

He told massed troops of a battle-hardened brigade that "you will still have many tests on battlefield before final victory has been achieved."

While the Prime Minister watched the soldiers from the southern front pass in review, the Central Truce Commission Board in Haifa released the sternest verdict of guilt in any case of truce violation that it has judged.

For the first time the truce board found Israel guilty of "systematically destroying" Arab villages. The board further indicated that the villages had been captured after the cease-fire became effective eight weeks ago, and that there was no evidence to support the Israel claim that Arab sniping had provoked "police action."

The board's decision concerned three villages: Ijzim, Jaba and Ein Razel, which overlook the Haifa-Tel Aviv highway from the western slope of Mount Carmel. Hours after the truce was invoked, Jewish officials closed the main road and said they were conducting a "police action" against the villages to prevent traffic harassment.

Prince Georges Lists School Needs

A $10,394,466 school building program to meet emergency needs in Prince Georges County was formulated yesterday by the County Board of Education.

At the same time, the board authorized bids for the first unit of new Fairmount Heights Negro Senior-Junior High School after first approving plans for the unit.

The first Fairmount Heights unit will contain 19 classrooms, about half of the total planned. Later units will also provide a cafeteria, an auditorium, and industrial arts and home economics departments. Bids will be opened at the board meeting October 13.

The board yesterday also named 133 new teachers.

The 10-million-dollar building program, the major item on yesterday's agenda will be presented to the Prince Georges County Commissioners for study and recommendation to the Maryland General Assembly which must authorize a bond issue to finance the program.

Completion of the Fairmount Heights plant is included in the 10-million-dollar program.

Listed as "imperative" needs, under the program, are the proposed Bladensburg Senior High School, of which a vocational unit has been started, the proposed Hyattsville area senior high school, and the Suitland High School.

Construction of the first unit of the Mount Rainier-Brentwood elementary school, an addition at District Heights, an addition at Ager Road Elementary School and a Bladensburg Grammar School addition also are recommended.

Renovation of the present high school building at Upper Marlboro for elementary school use, purchase of a site for a new school at Silver Hill, purchase of the three Greenbelt schools and the Calvert Houses school from the Federal Government and additions to several Negro schools also are listed on the "imperative" list.

The board yesterday, however, authorized purchase of the Calvert Houses school from the Government for $3485. The 5-room building and 1½-acre site were acquired as a war measure by the Government.

Purchase of an additional school bus, which can be obtained at once, to relieve the serious transportation problem caused by failure to receive six buses ordered last May, and purchase of 500 additional desks to meet the increased needs of the record 24,000 enrollment were authorized.

A delegation from the Mount Rainier-Brentwood area appeared before the board to urge inclusion of a new elementary school in that area on a site already purchased. The board had included the first unit of this school in its tentative program in the morning.

they marched out of the hall—some carrying Thurmond banners—followed by delegations from Rusk, Shelby, Gregg, and Limestone counties.

Individual members of these delegations, whose sympathies were with Truman, stayed in their seats. Johnson led Coke R. Stevenson by 87 votes in the official party tabulation of the near million vote in the August 28 primary.

C. C. McDonald of Wichita Falls, temporary chairman, keynoted the convention with an appeal to fight the Republicans. He said: "If we fight among ourselves over Negroes' rights this fall and permit the election of Dewey—with his Mustache—before the end of his administration we will wonder what became of white people's rights."

By a roaring voice vote, the convention then formally purged the temporary roll of the anti-Truman delegations.

Advisory Councils Planned For Montgomery Schools

A move to promote greater harmony in Montgomery County schools was taken yesterday by the county board of education, with an order that advisory councils should be organized in each of the 64 schools.

Each council will be made up of the principal, school trustees, Parent-Teacher Association members and representatives from the student body and the community. Included in a 10-point outline of functions was the stipulation that the council advise the principal or matters of student and teacher welfare.

Orders Reply to Miles

In other actions yesterday, the board:

1. Ordered the superintendent to make a formal reply to Franklin T. Miles, Chevy Chase attorney, who has charged that textbooks containing subversive propaganda are on the approved list.
2. Accepted a low bid of $171,789 by A. C. Minnix, Washington contractor, for construction of a 10-room Forest Grove Elementary School near Forest Glen rd. and Sligo Creek. It is scheduled to be ready for occupancy by September, 1949.

3. Deferred action on bids received for construction of four-room temporary buildings at Woodlin and Lynnbrook elementary schools. The buildings, of frame construction with sheet rock inside and out, would cost between $5000 and $6000 a classroom, as compared to around $25,000 per classroom for permanent type construction.

School officials said temporary structures are "an ace in the hole" in case of topheavy enrollment, but would be built only as a last resort.

Health Hazard Report

The board received, but did not make public, a county health department report on health hazards in some county schools due to inadequate facilities.

A report showed independent fund-raising activities in county schools last year netted $150,486, with Montgomery Blair High School, Silver Spring, raising $40,926. Another report stated that receipts from lunches served last year in school cafeterias amounted to $326,323.

Rep. Jonkman Is Trailing In Michigan

Detroit, Sept. 14 (AP)—Late voting rushes in industrial centers to-night swelled the size of Michigan primary balloting.

A three-way race for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination drew the only State-wide attention. Although three incumbent Republican Congressmen were unopposed for renomination, 14 other members of Congress faced rivals. Tight races faced Bartel Jonkman in the Fifth District, George Dondero in the seventeenth, Howard Coffin in the thirteenth, and John Bennett in the twelfth.

In the Fifth District, the first eight precincts reporting showed Jonkman trailing his Republican rival, Gerald R. Ford, Jr., 558 to 830.

Reports from the first 108 of the State's 4185 precincts gave G. Mennen Williams a slight lead in the Democratic gubernatorial race. Williams had 3147 votes to 2312 for Victor Bucknell and 2077 for Burnett J. Abbott.

Bradford Has Big Lead in Mass. Voting

Boston, Sept. 14 (AP)—Massachusetts Republicans tonight gave Gov. Robert F. Bradford a vote of confidence in his quest of the nomination for a second term.

In the returns from the first 158 out of the 1821 precincts, Bradford polled 16,271 votes while his party opponent, State Senator Edward M. Rowe, got only 2807.

In the Democratic primary, United States Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin rolled up a surprising 2097 vote for nomination for Governor.

Paul A. Dever led, however, with 3809 votes in 158 precincts. Tobin withdrew as a candidate when he was appointed to the cabinet post last month, but it was too late to take his name off the ballot. He campaigned actively for Dever.

The vote appeared to be light, bearing out predictions that only 500,000 of the State's 2,300,000 registered voters would exercise their franchise in the primaries.

Ball Leading In Minnesota GOP Primary

Minneapolis, Sept. 14 (AP)—Senator Joseph H. Ball took a lead for the Republican nomination for Senator and Mayor Hubert Humphrey of Minneapolis for the Democratic-Farmer-Labor nomination in first scattered returns from today's primary election.

On the Republican side, reports from 115 of 3732 precincts in the State gave Ball 317, Lenore Irene Bussman 27 and Earl L. Miller 90. Mrs. Bussman is a St. Paul housewife, Miller an Aitkin service station operator.

For the Democratic-Farmer-Labor nomination for Senator, the same precincts gave Humphrey 465 to 44 for James M. Shields, Minneapolis.

Humphrey heads a slate of candidates representing a wing of the party supporting President Truman. Shields is a group backing Henry Wallace.

State Auditor Stafford King took a surprising early lead in the contest for the Republican nomination for Governor. Returns from 16 precincts gave him 372 to 261 for Governor Luther Youngdahl.

Charles L. Halstead, Brainerd, endorsed by the Truman wing of the DFL party, was ahead for the DFL nomination for Governor.

Gibson Trails Emerson in Vermont Race

Montpelier, Vt., Sept. 14 (AP)—Republican Gov. Ernest W. Gibson, seeking renomination, trailed by a narrow margin tonight with more than half of the vote tabulated in one of his closest Vermont primaries in decades.

With 141 of the State's 246 cities and towns reported, Gibson had 12,325 votes to 12,500 for Lieut. Gov. Lee E. Emerson.

In opposing Gibsons bid for a second term, Emerson had the support of most of the State Republican machine including former Gov. Mortimer R. Proctor.

Gibson shattered Vermont tradition in the 1946 primary by defeating Proctor for the Republican gubernatorial nomination which usually is tantamount to election in this GOP stronghold.

Proctor was the first Governor in the State ever to be denied a second term.

United States Representative Charles A. Plumley appeared assured of renomination for an eighth term. The Republican vote for the State's lone seat in the national House in the same 141 towns was:

Plumley, 11,144; Finley Shepard, 2675; Free Smith, 4444; Harris Soule, 5169, and Everett Williams, 824.

Dire State of Future World Pictured by Scientists Here

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Scientists in assemblies here yesterday made dire predictions about the world's future.

Not war, but hunger, exploitation and overpopulation are the world's fate, they agreed separately and in symposia, from lecture platforms, over the radio and in interview.

"Freedom from want is changing from a hope to a pipedream, and this disillusionment is undoubtedly one of the principal causes of the world's present unrest," declared Dr. Fairfield Osborn, president of the New York Zoological Society.

"Man's command over nature has grown more rapidly than his mastery of himself," said Dr. Edmund W. Sinnott, director, Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, and president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science which is meeting here in centenary sessions.

"National and racial survival is currently a serious problem," agreed Dr. Harlow Shapiro, director of Harvard Observatory and past president of the AAAS.

"The field of human relations, in which the survival, or not, of the human race itself is being determined, has been sadly neglected," said Dr. Brock Chisholm, director general of the World Health Organization of United Nations.

The four spoke on mankind's hopes and fears for the world, in a radio broadcast last night at Constitution Hall. The program, "America's Town Meeting of the Air," was a radioed feature of the centenary.

As to the "hopes," the four agreed this rested largely on whether man is brave, unselfish, cooperative and intelligent enough to set the world out of its present dilemmas.

Earlier yesterday, Dr. Chisholm, in an interview, spoke of the increasing dangers of over-population of the world.

This population is increasing by two million persons each month, and even that rate will go "up and up," he said. Unless the population rise is checked, he declared, "the world will be hanging out a Standing Room Only sign within 2000 years."

Although problems of population control do not come under duties of the World Health Organization, he said, "no organization can escape the realization that something must be done to control population increases."

He admitted, although ruefully, that the major first-year project of present threats to the future is expected to increase population problems. Immediate result of ridding areas of malaria, he said, will be to increase the productivity of those areas.

But as the productivity increases, he agreed, so will the population. And the end result, he confessed, will be that "population will outstrip production." First countries to be tackled in WHO's anti-malaria program, he said, will be the Philippines and parts of India, Africa and South America.

In a Cassandra-like symposium yesterday on the world's natural resources, at departmental auditorium, three scientists agreed that man has been hogish to the point of present threats to his future extinction from lack of food and other resources.

Professor George E. Hutchinson, Yale University zoologist, said "man's activities" have reached a point "where human assets are the only thing we have in abundance."

Speaking on the exploitation of mineral resources, Dr. Thomas S. Lovering, staff research geologist, United States Geological Survey, pointed out that already the United States must depend on neighbors for manganese, chromium, nickel, tin and several other ores.

The third speaker, Dr. Stanley A. Cain, of Cranbrook Institute of Science, Bloomfield Hills, Mich., foresaw gloomy prospects for the world's food supply. Education in conservation is most lacking in those countries where the rate of natural resource destruction is highest.

Yesterday's meetings were not all pessimistic, just most of them. In some of more cheerful nature, the songs and colors of birds were brought to Hotel Statler; scientists discussed their growing knowledge of genes, heredity, regulators as well as body builders, and housing problems were blamed more on builders than scientists (by a scientist).

Prof. Arthur A. Allen, ornithologist, of Cornell University, brought representative recordings of songbird calls and moving pictures to the Statler last night for his lecture on the subject.

Among the pictures were some of the nesting habits of the bristle-thighed curlew, only North American bird whose nest and eggs were unknown to science prior to Dr. Allen's expedition to Alaska last June.

Livingston W. Houston, president of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Troy, N.Y., mechanical engineer, threw the housing shortage blame on "builders, designers, finance agencies and legislators" rather than on the scientists. He spoke at a special housing symposium of the AAAS at the Commerce Auditorium.

Efforts of scientists to alleviate housing shortages have been largely ignored, said Houston. He said that despite scientific success in showing the way for mass production of homes, the builders and others have not taken advantage of the new methods and materials.

Adams Leads
N. H. Primary
For Governor

Concord, N. H., Sept. 14 (AP)—Former Congressman Sherman Adams took a commanding lead tonight for the Republican nomination for Governor in New Hampshire's primary.

Unofficial returns from 200 of the State's 298 precincts gave Adams 21,574 votes to 3651 for State Representative John R. McIntire of Portsmouth.

The Democratic fight for the gubernatorial nomination was close with Herbert W. Hill, Dartmouth College professor, leading former National Committeeman Harry Carlson 4266 to 3077.

Carlson was ousted as national committeeman after he bolted President Truman at Philadelphia. Hill, Democratic State chairman, supported Mr. Truman.

Republican United States Senator Styles Bridges was unopposed for renomination.

But the race for the Democratic senatorial nomination saw Alfred E. Fortin, former Manchester alderman, leading Joseph Millinet, Manchester attorney, 131 to 119.

United States Representative Norris Cotton was leading two opponents for renomination. Returns from 20 of the district's 168 precincts gave Cotton 1091 votes; Rita Collier, lecturer, 106; Joseph Moore, Canaan lawyer, 84.

United States Representative Chester Merrow was unopposed for renomination.

Dr. Gilliam Given Cancer Institute Post

Appointment of Dr. Alexander G. Gilliam, native Virginian and Johns Hopkins graduate, to head the new epidemiology section of the cancer control branch, National Cancer Institute, was announced last night.

As section head, he will control the collection and classification of factors associated with the disease to help medical research find cancer's cause and cure.

Commenting on the appointment, Dr. John R. Heller, Jr., NCI director, said Dr. Gilliam's experience in epidemiology should prove invaluable in cancer control.

Born in Petersburg, Dr. Gilliam joined the Public Health Service in 1934, the same year he was awarded a degree of doctor of public health from Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health. He was first assigned to Los Angeles during a polio epidemic.

For the eight years following, he worked at the National Institute of Health, Bethesda, Md., on epidemiology of poliomyelitis, diphtheria, mumps and other infectious diseases. In 1943 he became first epidemiologist for the American Typhus Commission, and for the past two years has been detailed to the University of Michigan School of Public Health.

Dr. Gilliam, 44, is married, and has three children, A. G., Jr., 15; Laura E., 13, and Anne W., 8.

His appointment to the new post was announced by Surgeon General Leonard E. Scheele.

Wanted: A Badger

We wish that skeptical Congressmen who have questioned the yearning of Washingtonians for the right to vote could drop in at the offices of the Voteless D. C. League of Women Voters these days. They would encounter a stream of feminine citizens seeking information as to how they can make their political influence felt. One asks when New York voters may register. Another wants to know whether voting by mail is permissible in Arizona. A third asks whether she is eligible to cast a ballot in Illinois. The interest manifested cannot be regarded as anything less than widespread and intense, and in a great many instances it is quite evident that these potential voters would be as content to cast a ballot in the District as anywhere else.

Of course, the Voteless League is chiefly interested in securing suffrage for that vast majority of its own members who have no chance whatever to cast a ballot elsewhere. While waiting for Congress to act, however, the league is proving astonishingly resourceful in helping women to elevate themselves to the privileged status of voters elsewhere. The other day the league's "Information Please" section that is especially devoted to voters' questions was almost baffled when a female native of the District, now attending college here, asked if there was not some way under heaven in which she could obtain a vote. The league's advisers suggested that she could move elsewhere, but the college girl demurred. She loves it here. Then it was suggested that she would have to wait until Congress grants the District suffrage rights, but that, too, produced a pained expression. She wants to vote now.

Then came a spurt of genius. Wasn't it possible to get a vote by marriage? The league's experts traced this clew through the law books as if they had been a pack of bloodhounds. Soon they came up with a Wisconsin statute which says: "A woman married to a Wisconsin Federal employee residing in Washington, D. C., may vote in husband's home town in Wisconsin without any actual residence therein." In fair warning to Wisconsin men working for the Government, this college girl with a passion for suffrage is on your trail. But the Voteless League of Women Voters, which is a little skittish about getting into the matrimonial business, wants it distinctly understood that the girl is looking for a badger and not a wolf.

Down East

The mere fact that the Republicans won a clean sweep in Maine is nothing for them to crow about. Maine is almost as tightly wedded to the GOP as Alabama used to be to the Democratic Party. What is significant about the returns from Down East is the enormous plurality of more than 94,000 votes piled up by Mrs. Margaret Chase Smith in winning the senatorship. Her success in capturing 71.4 per cent of the total vote may be due in part to the fine record she has made in the House of Representatives, to her skill in campaigning and to the political inexperience of Dr. Adrian H. Scotlen, her opponent. When allowance is made for all these factors, however, the objective observer, looking at the landslide victories of all the Republican candidates, must conclude that an extraordinary wave of Republican sentiment has hit the Potato State.

With the election of Mrs. Smith, Maine takes the honor of sending the first Republican woman to the United States Senate. Indeed, the popular Congresswoman will be the first representative of her sex to win an election to the Senate without prior appointment to that body. Apparently her victory is wholly one of personal merit. She will bring to the Senate an uncommon degree of common sense as well as valuable experience in the legislative art. If the Republican candidates for the Senate in all the States were as promising as the new Senator from Maine, the problem that will loom before Governor Dewey, in the event of his advancement to the White House, would be enormously simplified.

Meanwhile the effect of Mrs. Smith's whopping vote will be to buoy the hopes of Republicans of all stripes. It means that a great majority of the Down Easters have proved invulnerable to the two chief arrows in the Democratic quiver. Presumably Mrs. Smith's vote for the Taft-Hartley Act was responsible for her loss of two industrial cities, Lewiston and Biddeford, as well as Old Town. But she carried 18 other cities, including Portland. The voters of Maine have been neither scared nor deceived by the distorted propaganda about this many-sided labor statute. Nor have they taken seriously President Truman's vehement denunciation of the Eightieth Congress of which Mrs. Smith was a part. That criticism was prominently reiterated by Dr. Scotlen and now lies buried under an avalanche of ballots. We strongly suspect that voters in Maine based their conclusions on more general considerations than either the Taft-Hartley Act or the record of the last Congress, and the chief of these may be a vague desire for a change of Administration. It was that factor which counted so heavily in favor of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, and it now seems to be running in the other direction against his successor.

Smearing Scientists

More than the men of any other profession, scientists have understood, and joined hands in opposition to, the mischievous interference of the Committee on Un-American Activities in their private lives and public work. They rallied magnificently to the support of Dr. Edward U. Condon when he was attacked by the committee, displaying an appreciation not alone of the dignity and importance of their calling but equally of fundamental American political values and traditions. Recently a group of distinguished scientists appealed to the President and to Gov. Thomas E. Dewey to check the irresponsible tactics of the committee tending to drive the ablest men of science out of Government service. President Truman did well, we think, to come to their defense in his address to the centennial session of the American Association for the Advancement of Science Monday night at Constitution Hall.

One could wish that the President would find some less inept expression than the cliché "red herring" to describe the committee's conduct. Americans concerned about the dangers of espionage on the part of a native Communist movement serving as a fifth column for a foreign government are not disposed to reject out of hand all congressional surveillance of security precautions. But the President was quite justified in citing as a serious danger to security the creation of an atmosphere "that makes men shun Government work" and in which "no man feels safe against the public airing of unfounded rumors, gossip and vilification." Such an atmosphere has, in fact, been created, largely through the recklessness of the Un-American Activities Committee, and the President properly called it "un-American—the most un-American thing we have to contend with today."

Scientists, being intellectuals, are, naturally suspect to the "Know Nothing" mentality of members of the Committee on Un-American Activities. The scientists not only possess knowledge—dangerous knowledge—of a sort incomprehensible to the committee members but they are also men who tend to think on all subjects, political as well as scientific, independently and unconventionally. Thus they tend to be, from the viewpoint of the committee, heretics. And the tragic fallacy of the committee is that heresy is synonymous with treason. The truth is, of course, that heresy of the sort that doubts and challenges all accepted thought is the sine qua non of progress. In a mechanistic age, it is also a sine qua non of national security.

Hyderabad

The background of India's armed invasion of the princely state of Hyderabad is a complex of political, economic, ethnic, and particularly religious factors. Among them the simplest is the now well-known fact that 86 1/2 per cent of the population is Hindu while about 12 1/2 per cent is Moslem. The Nizam, his advisers, most of the government personnel and most of the 35,000 state police are also Moslem. The ruling group has given every evidence in its conduct of negotiations with India of wishing to preserve, if possible, all its political privileges and feudal prerogatives. Only at the last moment, in appealing to the United Nations, has the Nizam's government offered to consult the wishes of its people by means of a plebiscite.

The Indian government stoutly maintains that it has acted with unusual patience and restraint in the face of duplicity and calculated terrorism against the Hindu population. The atrocities of which Delhi complains are apparently pretty well substantiated, particularly acts of terrorism that have been committed by the so-called Razakars, a quasi-military organization of Moslem fanatics.

But the Indian government paints a better picture of its policies than all the facts warrant. Despite the ethnic and economic ties which bind Hyderabad to the surrounding areas of India, the Indian government has imposed an economic blockade on Hyderabad extending even to medical supplies. This sort of policy certainly cannot contribute to the welfare of Hindus within the princely state, nor to an atmosphere of conciliation among the Moslem minority. And now the Indian government has capped a series of increasingly threatening demands on Hyderabad by invasion "to restore order."

What possible advantage the Indian government expects to gather from obstructing the Hyderabad appeal to the United Nations we fail to see—unless it is to be able to present the U. N. with a fait accompli and, as has been done before, declare that the dispute no longer exists. But India is running other risks, viz, from Pakistan. The danger is present of a spread of the communal, or Hindu-Moslem, disturbances in both India and Pakistan, perhaps even of military action by Pakistan in support of the Hyderabad Moslems. This would be an outcome fully as costly in bloodshed as India's opposition to U. N. action is costly in terms of international morality.

A vigorous seizure of the initiative by the Security Council, or by the Assembly, calling for an immediate plebiscite under U. N. auspices, appears to be the most logical and the most imperative next move. Both sides, in the Hyderabad conflict, as in the Kashmir struggle, are too far committed to be able to back down. A face-saving exit, and one that upholds the principles of good international relations, can be provided by U. N.-sponsored plebiscites in both cases and the United States Government ought not to be the last to propose and push for such a solution.

Europe's Hub

Allocations of Marshall Plan aid have run into a snag in Paris which in substance is caused by a purely intra-American argument. ECA is arguing, quite rightly, that the Europeans themselves should decide among themselves how the pie should be divided. But the Bizone, or western Germany, is in part under American management, and General Clay is holding out for a bigger slice than the members of the OEEC, or Organization of European Economic Cooperation, consider justified. For the time being, the dispute has been resolved, but some feathers have been ruffled, and the rift still is latent.

We sympathize with the Europeans to the extent that Mr. Lawrence Wilkinson, General Clay's representative, had no business trying to stage a holdup in the OEEC by saying that Congress would see that the Bizone got "adequate" treatment, if the OEEC failed to provide it. That is not the way to behave in a community enterprise. There also is the pervading fear that the United States is intent upon building up western Germany at the neighbors' expense. This question would not arise if after the war the Europeans and America had based policy toward Germany upon the incorporation of the German states into a European community. In that event there might not have been any need of the Marshall Plan, for western Germany is the hub of Europe, and recovery is pivoted upon the revival of its Ruhr. As it is, western Germany is the great lagard in European recovery, a situation which, if continued out of political fear of a revival of Germany, is bound to negative the Marshall Plan. There is something self-defeating in this fear of bringing back to full life the workshop of Europe.

With France's view that production as well as distribution in the Ruhr should be vested in an international authority, we have always agreed; but the French were less than logical when they opposed the appointment at more than the technical level of German representatives on the OEEC. An integrated Europe needs faith as well as organization, and the danger of a resurrected Germany would surely be offset by a Germany which is welded in a European community.

Building the U. N.

A bombed-out Berliner suddenly transported to a certain spot in mid-Manhattan might easily find his surroundings uncomfortable. The site of the future U. N. headquarters, its squalid growth of tenements and packing houses demolished, is today a wasteland of dirt and rubble level with the sidewalks. The lifting of a shovel full of debris in the official "ground-breaking" ceremony thus may have a symbolism that would not fail to impress, or at least baffle, our imaginary man from Berlin. With even more force than at earlier stages of the building program, the question arises: Will the U. N. headquarters be the home of a real agency for world order and justice, or another empty monument to the age-long dream of peace?

Perhaps we can carry the symbolism a little further. Before the foundations of the new headquarters building can be laid, excavators must remove an estimated 195,000 cubic yards of debris and earth to get down to bedrock and 57,000 cubic yards of that rock itself before the footings of the structures can be set. This is only standard procedure in the construction of skyscrapers in New York City. The solid basis of Manhattan schist must be reached and pierced if any building of the size planned for the U. N. is to stand firm. It is a moot question, however, whether the U. N. itself, as a structure of men and nations rather than of stone and steel, was built on equally sound foundations.

Historians in future years, if history is still being written, will give the final answer. But their answer will depend on what is done today to make the United Nations a viable organization and to reinforce its framework where necessary. The shifting sands of national sovereignty underlie the U. N. structure, and what should be a skeleton of welded steel is shrunken and cracked by jealousies, animosities, and suspicions. The difficulties of strengthening the organization, however great, make no excuse for failure to try—and try again. No one in this country, surely, would willingly forfeit the chance for peaceful accommodation through the operations of the U. N. in favor of a cataclysmic struggle by force to determine which of the present antagonists shall rule a devastated world.

THE HUNT

Now the clear blue—and now the blood
Quickens to answer with rising flood
Under the fur and the coat bright-bred:
You the huntsman—the pursued.

Clearing the firch with iron shod booves
You leave the meadow and enter the groves
Where I, four-footed, with vixen eyes,
Quivering listen to beagle-cries,
Quivering watch the hunter nearing—
Then leap the bush and enter the clearing
Skimming the fields with flying plumes,
Past the beather and over the broom
With wind-blown coat and gaping mouth,
Pointing a course obliquely South,
An arrow sped from a straining bow,
Hard on the scent of a trail I know
That ends on the crest of a subtle knoll
Where I plummet down a slanting hole.

There, in the cool earth-dark, shall I
Sleek my sides as you thunder by.

Letters To The Editor

German Guilt

The letter received from Germany by Bertha W. Martin and published September 11 under the title "Inside Germany" is an example of propaganda against which we must carefully guard. The letter contains much which is true, but intermingled with the truth are items which have been shown to be untrue. To begin with, the Czech government did not force all Germans to emigrate because they were merely of German descent. Those Germans who were faithful to Czechoslovakia during the Nazi regime were allowed to remain.

It was those Czechs of German descent who welcomed the Hitler putch and invasion, and cooperated with the Nazis, who were not wanted as citizens and forced to leave. Over 90 per cent of the Germans in Czechoslovakia voted for the pro-Nazi German candidates in the last prewar election.

The actual exodus was under international observation (United States observers were present) and, according to uncensored reports, the Germans were treated much better than the Czechs who were driven from the "Sudetenland" after German occupation. The Germans were not forced to leave all their possessions—and certainly not wedding bands.

The statement that the German population "did not know anything to do with those atrocities in the concentration camps" has time and again been proven to be false. The Germans did know what was taking place in the concentration camps. The Germans did know of the atrocities and tortures inflicted by the Gestapo and S. S. upon those unfortunate enough to be considered undesirable, and they did know of the unnecessary brutalities practiced upon the masses of people in German-occupied countries—deliberate starvation, wholesale looting, wanton destruction and mass executions.

Let us not be deluded or lulled into the belief that the German people did not know of the Nazi terrorism, and that they did not participate directly or indirectly.

"De Gaulle's Ideas"

With pleasure I read in your issue of September 11 the editorials titled "De Gaulle's Ideas" and "U. N. Guard Force."

The American people have had a distorted picture of De Gaulle's personality, due in great measure to Franklin Roosevelt's dislike of the general (no me-too-man), aided and abetted, I am sorry to say, by our American press generally, which does not understand him. So it was refreshing to have the real De Gaulle depicted in your editorial.

Three points are brought out: First, that De Gaulle foretold that the Communist-imposed French constitution would not work, with its multitude of political parties. The present chaotic situation proved De Gaulle right. Second, that instead of having totalitarian ambition, he has always hewn to the present constitution, which he deprecates. Third, that the present National Assembly does not represent the will of the French people; so De Gaulle, as a French citizen, is within his rights in demanding its dissolution, to hold new elections and a convention to draft a new constitution, somewhat similar to ours, which gives more power to the executive with checks and balances by the legislative and judicial branches of the government.

General de Gaulle has written several notable books. In one of them he pointed the way that led to the blitzkrieg which the French general staff (including Petain) ignored, but the Germans adopted and applied by overrunning several democratic countries, including France. In one of his books he foretold exactly where Hitler would invade France. When the German military juggernaut crashed through at the very place indicated he was promoted from colonel to general, and given all the old and new tanks that could be got together. With these disparate weapons he won the only two battles won by the French.

I have a book in French by Philippe Barres entitled Charles de Gaulle, which includes all the aforesaid, and much more. I consider De Gaulle one of the greatest Frenchmen of all time! This patriotic Frenchman and military genius, at some not distant future time, may head a French army with other allied armies of civilization, stationed on the strategic Rhine to hold back the hordes of the Kremlin!

Appeal For Children

It is essential that citizens of this country and other countries of the United Nations demand that the General Assembly reverse the action of the U. N. Economic and Social Council and continue the United Nations Appeal for Children. It is inconceivable that with an estimated 230 million needy children in the world today, that we can permit such a worthwhile undertaking as the United Nations Appeal for Children to be discontinued after January 1, 1949.

At present the administration is in the hands of the United Nations, but the actual money to feed and clothe the needy children comes from private contributions. If you eliminate the administration, as is contemplated, you take away the lifeblood of this work.

How can we expect to build a peaceful world without seeing to it that our adults of tomorrow are properly cared for today?

Let us make our voices felt by informing our Government and the United Nations that the forthcoming General Assembly meeting in Paris must continue the United Nations Appeal for Children.

Overstressed Sex

In recent issues of The Washington Post I read the horrifying account of the Carolina farmer who pursued the lady leaving the bus and assaulted her. He was quoted as saying that he did not know why he did it—he must have been crazy.

The first account said that he had been to a burlesque show. I am no prude. I do not consider nudity immoral in itself, though the impact could be terrific to one unused to it. But sex can be overemphasized in its place in human living.

I wonder—if there is a Judgment Day, or any moral equivalent thereof—why will we have to answer the hardest, the respectable man who panders sex for the money in it, in entertainment, literature, or advertising, or the boy whose primitive impulses run away with what civilization he might have acquired!

Right To Answer

The September 11 communication of Father Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., concerning "Freedom for Heretics," leaves me cold somehow. It says that the only issue is whether it was "ultra vires" for the Federal Communications Commission to "define the quantity, and the public interest value involved in atheism versus deism."

It seems that there is an ordinary matter of fair play, American-style, involved that either rightly or wrongly carries a great deal of weight in my view. I always like to see somebody who has been attacked have a reasonable chance to fight back and that is where freedom of speech, press, and radio seems to enter. That seems to me the kind of freedom that the Federal Communications Commission would be obliged to maintain.

My recollection seems to tell me that the broadcast which started all this controversy was not a mere discussion of religious questions, without reference to atheism or theists. It was an attack on atheism, theists, or both. I think they were even called "dumbbells" or some such appellation. I shouldn't like to see any citizens castigated for their views without a reasonable chance to reply. I would feel very different about the case on hand if atheism, theists, or both, had not been directly attacked.

I certainly would want Father Walsh to have a chance to answer back if he were ever denounced for his views either alone or as a member of a group.

We can all promote our views without any too uncharitable attitude toward those who differ. Let's not preach "freedom in the marketplace of ideas" and practice something else. And even more, let's not permit anyone or his ideas to be attacked without a reasonable chance to answer. That to me would be just as "brutalizing" as atheism might be. It would be "brutalizing" to those who practice the attack.

Overpopulation

The question of overpopulation is today, as in the time of Malthus, one of close concern to the intelligent citizen. We have frustrated and defeated God's will in vanquishing the epidemics and plagues that were once His instruments of depopulation. And we have overcome the destructiveness of war by an increased fertility.

It is obvious then that we require a more realistic specific to curb the rising tide of population. Let those who will not practice continence assume an increased share of the tax burden, since it is for their offspring that additional schools, hospitals, jails, asylums and potter's fields are inevitably required. This means a complete reversal of the antiquated policy of granting tax relief to the recklessly prolific.

Blanket Charge

I was disappointed to note that your paper dignified the letter of F. G. Campbell by publication on September 11. He states that "whenever Congress creates a new agency where huge Government expenditures are to be made, Communists or fellow-travelers show up in the head and front of the people who staff such agencies." Aside from the difficulty of comprehending just what "head and front" signifies, it is evident that Mr. Campbell has made a generalization that is so far from true it is laughable.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

The Coming Climax

THE FINAL step in the long, painful war of nerves with the Soviet Union over the ruined City of Berlin is now being prepared. In a sense it is a burial stone that is being engraved to mark the end of a tragic era of doubt and uncertainty.

State Department experts who have been close to the negotiations are putting together a carefully documented record of what has happened from the very beginning. This will be published in the form of a White Book.

The negotiators in the department believe it will prove beyond a doubt that this country has gone to the farthest limits of patience and forbearance to end the dispute peacefully. They are convinced it will show any fair-minded person that deliberate Russian obstruction made a peaceful resolution impossible.

This step is being taken with a solemn understanding of what it can mean for the future. That future is darker now than at any time since the end of World War II.

Short of the ultimate calamity, which is the beginning of World War III, events in coming weeks are expected to take more or less the following course. With the end of negotiations, the United States, Great Britain and France will refer the Berlin dispute to the General Assembly of the United Nations.

The U. N. will then become the battleground as it has so often in the past. Officials here who have followed the whole struggle at close range are convinced that the case of the Western powers is so strong that it cannot help but win support of all except Russia and its satellites.

THUS we shall see perhaps 48 nations lined up against five or six, and that, too, has happened before. The difference this time is that the issue is more crucial than any ever brought before the organization that has struggled feebly to impose order and law on a divided world.

It is for this reason that the split may finally put an end to the U. N. Conceivably, with every nation ranged on the other side, the Soviet Union could pull out, dragging along the states under her domination. Then the two worlds, which have been held in a frail and uncertain relationship by the U. N., would be in open opposition.

That, mind you, is the hopeful view. It is based on the assumption that the Soviet Union does not at this time want war. And that is a perilous assumption. There is, of course, one man who could reverse at least temporarily the present drift toward the brink of the precipice. That is Josef Stalin. One more meeting with Stalin was all that stood in the way of the final break. The results of that meeting may be known before this is in print.

THOSE who have had the closest dealings with the Russians over the longest period of time are today most pessimistic. And one reason for their pessimism is what happened in the aftermath of the previous meeting with Stalin.

Stalin at that earlier meeting gave the signal for four-power talks in Berlin to settle the basic quarrel over the blockade and the new currency introduced by the Western powers. A wave of hope was quickened in every capital of the world. But it did not last long. The Western negotiators in Berlin found the Russians demanding all or nothing. Never before had the promise of Stalin been so at variance with the performance of his undertakings. The only possible conclusion seemed to be that the real intention of Moscow was to bring about failure and that the Kremlin talks were merely a device to frighten the casual observer on this side of the Atlantic to the decision seems to have been taken out of responsible hands, whether Western or Soviet. Rioting German mobs appear to have it in their power to set off the explosion.

The critics who view with hindsight are having a field day. "If I had only been making the decisions this would never have happened," is the theme of the more restrained. At the further extreme the effort is to make it seem that a mendacious and willful crew led us into this misadventure.

Naturally, mistakes have been made—mistakes of judgment and serious ones of wrong decisions. But it is a deep disservice to the country at such a time as the present to try deliberately to smear those who have been struggling with the fearfully difficult problem of our time. It is hardly less than a form of sabotage.

Psychiatry

There has been considerable discussion and considerable confusion recently printed on the subject of psychiatry. This branch of the art of medicine deals with people whose attitudes toward themselves and others makes life difficult. These attitudes, closely related, are acquired through life experiences, unlike intelligence and physical characteristics which are inherited.

The patient demonstrates these attitudes in his relations with the psychiatrist. As he begins to recognize and then understand these attitudes with the help of the psychiatrist, the symptoms, arising from the attitudes are usually relieved. DOCTOR.

A Communication

I HAVE just read your editorial of September 5, "Remedy for Stampedes," discussing Senate Resolution 62, which I introduced in the final days of the Eightieth Congress as a proposed means to avoid the habitual last-minute legislative jam in each session of Congress. Your editorial was a most constructive approach.

We are in complete agreement in the need for a legislative instrument with which to combat the procrastination of Congress in coming to grips early in each session with fundamental issues. Senate Concurrent Resolution 62 is a suggested method which, I agree, is certainly subject to improvement. It was introduced as a basis for discussion and I am very hopeful that other papers interested in the improvement of congressional procedure and students generally of the Congress will follow the lead of The Washington Post and come forward between now and the next session of Congress with some practical suggestion either for improving my resolution or approaching the problem in some other manner at least as practical.

THE MAIN feature of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 62 is the provision for a legislative program to be drawn up at the start of each session of Congress by the majority leaders of the House and Senate, after consultation with the chairmen and ranking members of the standing committees of the two houses. The legislative program so compiled would provide an estimated schedule of action by the standing committees and by each house on the major legislative issues and particularly on appropriation bills.

I have no illusions that such a program would have the finality of a railroad timetable. As your editorial pointed out, a filibuster in the Senate could upset any such schedule. At the same time, however, filibusters rarely occur in connection with appropriation bills or other legislation of general nature, and it is usually possible to predict ahead of time which bills might run into "extended debate."

Furthermore, even though the Congress would hardly be likely to adhere to a schedule slavishly, the publication early in a session of a proposed schedule of action on major legislation would serve as a significant spur to the chairmen of the respective House and Senate committees and to the Congress generally to attempt, at least, to come within shooting distance of the schedule set down in the legislative program.

As I pointed out at the time I introduced this resolution, I doubt very much if the chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency would have waited until a few weeks before the end of the second regular session of the Eightieth Congress to hold hearings on a long-range housing bill if the leadership of the Congress had been required at the start of either the first or the second session to indicate when housing legislation could be expected to clear the respective House and Senate committees and the two chambers. Similarly, farm legislation undoubtedly would have been scheduled for orderly enactment long before 4 a. m. the morning of June 20, 1948, which was, at that time, presumed to be the closing hours of the Eightieth Congress.

IN BOTH the first and second sessions, nearly all of the major appropriation bills were held up in the House Appropriations Committee until long into the session, then reported out and passed by the House in rapid-fire order and sent over to the Senate at the last moment. The Senate Appropriations Committee, which had very little to do early in the session, then became swamped with all of these bills at one time.

The result approaches chaos. We had already entered the 1948 fiscal year in July, 1947, before many of the agencies of the Government could know the conditions under which they would have to operate in that fiscal year. Thousands of employees were furloughed until it could be determined whether funds were available to pay them. Many technical experts were lost to private industry. Again, last June when the appropriation bills for the current fiscal year were being enacted, the legislation was turned out at such breakneck speed that it was impossible for individual members of Congress to know on what they were voting.

A legislative program which set a time schedule on these appropriation bills would certainly tend to avoid such a situation. The agencies of the Government would be placed on notice to have all their data available for the Appropriations Committee and would have no excuse for delaying their presentations. The committees themselves would, I am sure, be most anxious to get their bills through on schedule. Right now, a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee can spend days and weeks and months on a particular appropriation bill and there is no deadline, formal or informal, to inspire prompt action.

YOUR editorial questions the advisability of placing the full responsibility for the shaping of a legislative program on two members of the majority of the House and Senate, and suggests, instead, the formation of a legislative executive council of the type proposed originally by the LaFollette-Monroney Committee.

It is, of course, true that the president has, as you put it, the keenest sort of interest in the shaping of the legislative program. However, although I agree that it would be very worthwhile to establish a working council of the executive and legislative representatives for closer liaison generally between the Congress and the President, the fact remains that the Congress does have, and jealously guards, the sole right to determine the legislative program. It will take, and would not doubt resist giving the Executive a say in the order in which the Congress would take up legislative proposals—his or theirs.

A joint committee of Congress to draw up a legislative program would find itself, I am afraid, engaged in intermarital and intramarital wrangles over priorities to be accorded various bills.

That is why my resolution placed the authority in the two majority leaders. They would naturally be expected not only to confer with the chairmen and ranking members of the standing committees but also to analyze the legislative situation in the light of their own experience and their knowledge of the practical realities of congressional procedure and to come forward with a legislative program that they would consider capable of fulfillment.

IF THIS responsibility were placed in the Policy Committee of the Senate and the Steering Committee of the House, it could very well broaden the base of agreement, and your suggestion in that respect is most helpful. At the same time, however, it is presumed that the majority leaders of the two houses speak generally for their party leadership in their respective houses.

What I would like to see is the establishment of this legislative program in such a formalized manner, inflexible, that it would lead to bickering and the sort of impasse that we have experienced in connection with the legislative budget.

I appreciate very much the interest you have shown in this proposal and the constructive suggestions you have made. The Washington Post can take a great deal of the credit for the enactment of the LaFollette-Monroney bill which has already done so much to modernize the procedures of Congress.

Your continued interest in the problem of making the mechanics of Congress equal to meeting the complex issues which Congress faces reflects responsible journalism of the highest order and explains the ever-increasing stature and influence of The Washington Post.

Matter Of Fact

The Tele-Con Nightmare

FOR MORE than 80 days, the highest officials of the American Government have been in the grip of the "tele-con nightmare," as one of them has called it. The tele-con machine will accept a message in Washington, scramble it beyond decoding, radio it across the Atlantic, unscramble it and flash it simultaneously on viewing screens in the London Embassy, the Paris Embassy and General Clay's Berlin headquarters. By this rather horrible magic, the four capitals have been in continuous conversation since the Soviets precipitated the Berlin crisis.

Generally, the tele-con day begins at 11 a. m., when gives Ambassador Lewis W. Douglas just time to gulp down his early morning coffee and hurry to his tele-con room. Often it has continued until long after midnight in Washington, when the dawn is already breaking over Grosvenor Square, the Place de la Concorde and Dahlem.

The men involved become so exhausted that on one occasion Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett told the State Department tele-con operator, "For God's sake, tell Lou Douglas it's time to stop; we're not making any sense any more." The ordeal has taken a visible toll of the whole inner circle of policy makers here. But the tele-con nightmare, which hitherto has been so narrowly confined, is now at last likely to burst forth from its guarded chambers and to become a nightmare for us all.

THE BERLIN crisis is, in fact, at last approaching its inevitable climax. It has unraveled slowly because of the constant difficulty of coordinating the views of the British, French and American partners. Before the Moscow talks began, for example, the British Foreign Office wished to send another note to the Kremlin, while Washington insisted on an appeal to Stalin. In the last few days, on the other hand, the Foreign Office and the Quai d'Orsay have argued for another appeal to Stalin. But the State Department has held that Stalin's previous broken promises have made any new Soviet assurances utterly worthless unless they are offered in writing.

Agreement was reached over the weekend on the method of the new approach to Moscow. As a result, it is barely possible that the Soviet government will suddenly reverse its field, lifting the blockade and honorably restoring four-power control of Berlin. But the signs suggest an outcome far more grim and ominous.

If the worst happens, the British, French and American governments will appeal the Berlin case to the United Nations, as was first predicted nearly three months ago in this space. On this course also it was difficult to reach agreement. (In dealing with the British and French, the American policy-makers have been in the anomalous position of a soldier in the rear of a platoon urging his comrades at the front to hold firm.)

London and Paris have already consented, however. The whole ugly tale of Soviet aggression, bullying, double dealing and bad faith will thus be officially spread upon the record. And after Molotov has interposed his veto in the Security Council, the U. N. General Assembly at Paris is expected to pass a heavy vote of censure.

THE REAL question is, "What next?" In considering this question, the American policy-makers have been greatly heartened by the State Department's confidential public opinion polls. It is almost incredible, but nonetheless a fact, that these carefully checked and rechecked polls show 82 per cent of the American people ready to face the horror of another war rather than yield to further Soviet bullying. Considerably more than 60 per cent have specifically endorsed the stern expedient of breaking the blockade by sending an armed convoy to Berlin.

Here, again, there is natural hesitation among the Europeans, who are on the firing line. But in London and Paris, as in Washington, wise men basically accept Winston Churchill's dictum that another appeasement in Berlin will leave a situation comparable to the situation after Munich. The Western powers will in the end stand firm, by present indications.

Very broadly, a choice will therefore be made between two courses. The first course is to use the air lift to maintain our position in Berlin; to accept formally the division of the world into two hostile camps, and to act accordingly. If this course is adopted, the Soviets and their

Finding Communication

The President's communication was in reply to the following letter, dated August 19, from Findling:

"My dear Mr. President:
"We have been advised that you have requested a report concerning a recent conference in Senator Taft's office, having to do with the typographical union and newspaper publishers. The following is my recollection of what occurred:

"At the request of Senator Taft, related to me through Mr. (Thomas E.) Shroyer, chief counsel for the Joint Committee on Labor Management Relations under the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947, Mr. John and I went to Senator Taft's office at 11 a. m. on Wednesday, July 28, 1948. Mr. John is chief of the District Court injunction section of the general counsel's office and has the responsibility for conducting litigation involving temporary injunctive relief under Section 10 (J) and (L) of the National Labor Relations Act, as amended.

"At the opening of the meeting there were present in the Senator's office, in addition to Senator Taft, Mr. Shroyer, Mr. John and myself, Mr. John S. Knight, publisher of the Knight chain of newspapers, including a Chicago newspaper, Mr. E. M. Antrim, business manager of the Chicago Tribune, Mr. Richard J. Finnegan, editor of the Chicago Sun, and Mr. Robert C. Bassett, counsel for the Hearst newspapers, including the Chicago Hearst newspapers.

Statement by Taft

"After conventional preliminaries and introductions, Senator Taft said that he appreciated our coming to his office and that he wished to discuss the typographical union proceedings. He stated that under the present structure of the National Labor Relations Act, the enforcement of the statute, had to be through the National Labor Relations Board; and that, although he had originally entertained a different view, his colleagues had persuaded him that it was undesirable to permit private parties to enforce the provisions of the act by injunctive litigation privately instituted.

"He said that he regarded the ITU case as the most important case that had come to the board, and that it stood as a symbol to many members of the Congress, and he believed, to the public, of the effectiveness of the enforcement machinery of the statute. He said that he was therefore greatly disturbed by reports that had come to him from various sources, indicating that there was a serious breakdown of the enforcement machinery in the case of the typographical union and the publishers. He declared, particularly, that in a situation where the general counsel's office had sought and obtained an injunction, it was believed the Government's responsibility to see that the injunction was obeyed.

"Tells of Investigation
"Mr. John and I said that we were in no position to discuss the details of the typographical union's conduct insofar as it involved a possible violation of the injunction because we did not have all the facts at our command; that we had sent staff investigators into various cities all over the country during the previous several weeks to obtain information as to exactly what was happening in negotiations between publishers and the Typographical Union; and that these investigators were then in process of preparing a written report correlating the data that they had obtained.

"We said that we expected to have their report in our hands within a week, and the general counsel's office would then be in a position to make a determination as to whether or not there had been a violation of the decree. We stated emphatically our awareness of our responsibility to the public and to the court; that, as Mr. (Robert) Denham had publicly stated, the injunction had not been idly sought; and that if violations of the injunction were occurring we would promptly call them to the court's attention.

"Wanted Us to Know
"Senator Taft repeated in substance that he had called us because he wanted us to know that he was keenly interested in effective enforcement of the statute and that in his view and, in the view of the joint committee, the typographical union case was the most important proceeding that had arisen under the new act. He then excused himself, saying that he might return if he could get away from another meeting which required his presence.

"Thereafter, the meeting continued in Senator Taft's office with the publishers discussing in great detail the present status of the negotiations in Chicago from their point of view and with particular reference to whether or not certain demands made by the union in the negotiations were prohibited by the injunction decree.

"During this discussion the publishers indicated that if the injunction decree did not prohibit all of the conduct they thought unlawful, they wished us to enlarge the decree or to institute another injunction proceeding. We questioned the practicability of any such suggestion, but said we would consider it further. Mr. Shroyer was present throughout these conversations and participated in them to the extent of indicating from time to time his and the joint committee's interest in the situation in the newspaper industry.

"The meeting closed at about 12:45 p. m., with the understanding that after we had had an opportunity to study and analyze the report of our investigators we might wish to discuss the situation with the publishers' attorneys in Washington. The publishers assured us that their representatives would be available for any discussions we desired to have. Senator Taft did not return to the meeting.

"Very respectfully,
"(Signed (David P. Findling.)

Hoover Holds Tax Cut Vital To Social, Economic Advance

smile disappeared quickly as he began his review of the vast Federal machine known as Government and his commission's plan to chart its simplification.

"The recommendations which the commission will make for reorganization of the governmental machinery may seem quite drastic," he began.

"The present tax burden upon the American people threatens to curtail social and economic advancement.

"The draining of the people's earnings into the Treasury of the United States has become so great that, if it continues, the Government may become the only source of capital.

"Until this situation is corrected many projects may have to be postponed."

The commission, Mr. Hoover said, has organized 22 "task forces," each of which is engaged in an exhaustive study of a specific problem. More than 250 leading citizens, who have no other interest than the public welfare, have been recruited for this work. The various task groups, Mr. Hoover said, are engaged in minute examination of the structural organization of the Government. They are investigating procurement, possibilities of consolidation to eliminate overlapping, and the effect such action might have on national defense.

"We are studying social security, public health and hospitalization," he declared. "And we are studying the operations of 26 Federal lending agencies which are now in active operation."

With reference to the manifold responsibilities on the White House, Mr. Hoover said:

"Between 60 and 80 independent agencies are directly under the President, in addition to the 10 great departments. This is too much. The President must be relieved of many of his administrative functions if he is to concentrate on the far more important national and international problems which come to him for attention."

"The President must be given more support in handling his manifold duties. He should have more working vice presidents, which is another way of saying more Cabinet members. There is nothing new about advocating an enlarged Cabinet. It has been advocated consistently dating back to the late President Wilson."

Reports of the various task forces will begin to accumulate in November and December, Mr. Hoover said. Leaders of the task groups then will be assembled by the commission to compose their differences. Only when those reports have been thoroughly weighed, he said, will the commission draft its recommendations to Congress.

"We know we are in for a lot of homework," he said, "but we are ready for it."

Mr. Hoover, smiling and buoyant as he is off-the-record exchange following his prepared address, drew many a hearty laugh with his quick wit. On-the-record discussion of politics was strictly taboo.

Taft to Have Reply

Courts Suspend Stocks Tip Sheet

Based on Comics

New York, Sept. 14 (AP).—A weekly stock market letter allegedly involving coded advice picked from comic strips and humor columns today was ordered temporarily suspended by Supreme Court Justice Denis O'Leary Colahan.

The judge issued a temporary injunction against Frederick N. Goldsmith, Plainfield, N. J.

Attorney General Nathaniel L. Goldstein said Goldsmith's weekly financial letter for stock market trading involved coded advice picked from comic strips and humor columns.

Goldsmith has earned as much as $39,000 a year from his letter and his subscribers now total 200, according to Goldstein's office.

Winnie Reported Asking Windsor To Quit Memoirs

Paris, Sept. 14 (AP).—France Soir said today Winston Churchill has asked the Duke of Windsor to quit writing his memoirs.

In a front-page story from its correspondent in Cannes, the French afternoon daily said Churchill made the request when he and his wife visited the duke and duchess last weekend.

A series of articles published by Life Magazine about a year ago brought the story of the young Edward up to the close of World War I.

There has been no official announcement on whether the duke was planning on finishing his story.

Bridges Hits Army In 'Strike Breaking'

San Francisco, Sept. 14 (AP)—Accusing the Army of "strikebreaking" in the 13-day old Pacific maritime tieup, Harry Bridges' CIO Longshoremen's Union said today it would seek to extend its strike tactics to foreign ports.

Thirty CIO pickets, including Bridges, appeared at the Fort Mason hiring office after the Army called for individual dock workers to handle the growing backlog of military cargo in West Coast ports. "The union intends to resist this strikebreaking with all the resources at its command, including a call to longshoremen overseas to refuse to unload war cargo at ports of destination," a union statement said.

The Army issued its call after Bridges' CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union called a "boycott" on Army hiring for by-passing union hiring halls. Thirty white-capped pickets turned up at the Army hiring office during the morning and a handful of individual dock workers signed up. All signers were required to sign Government loyalty pledges.

Growing N. Y. Truck Strike Threatens Milk

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—The city's truck strike took a sharp turn for the worse today after nearly a week of improvement. Milk supplies, among other things, were jeopardized. While one stream of drivers continued to go back on their trucks under new contracts with independent truckers, an estimated 3800 were walking out as another local union joined the strike. But Mayor William O'Dwyer said he had named Hugh E. Sheridan, impartial arbitrator for the trucking industry, to mediate. He said conflicting demands of local unions, with some employers having to do business with two or more locals, created a "confusing and an unhealthy condition."

AFL Opposes 121 Congress Aspirants

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 14 (AP).—Eight United States Senate and 113 House candidates today were marked for defeat by the AFL in the November election.

Joseph Keenan of Chicago, director of Labor's League for Political Education, announced the AFL will oppose these Republican senatorial candidates:

Senators Henry Dworshak of Idaho, Joseph H. Ball of Minnesota, C. Wayland Brooks of Illinois, Edward V. Robertson of Wyoming, Chapman Revercomb of West Virginia and George A. Wilson of Iowa and GOP Candidates Patrick Hurley of New Mexico and Ross Rizley of Oklahoma.

Keenan spoke at the twenty-third annual convention of the AFL Electrical Workers. He did not name the 113 House candidates on the AFL list.

Keenan told 2300 delegates that the league (counterpart of the CIO Political Action Committee) has begun a drive for one million dollars in dollar contributions.

The fund will be used to help candidates opposed to legislators "hostile to labor," Keenan said. He said his league would work with CIO PAC "in some places."

Keenan said the league will support Democratic Senators Theodore Green of Rhode Island, James E. Murray of Montana and Edwin Johnson of Colorado as well as Democratic Senate Candidates Guy Gillette of Iowa and Clinton P. Anderson of New Mexico.

The objective of the AFL's political action, Keenan said, is to remove from Congress those legislators who approved of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Wallace Sees 'New Bloody Fridays'

Chicago, Sept. 14 (AP).—Protected by a special detail of 350 Chicago policemen, Henry A. Wallace declared tonight that final State rulings keeping the Progressive ticket off the Illinois ballot threaten "new bloody Fridays, new Haymarkets."

(He referred to 1886 Chicago labor riots, in the Haymarket riot of May 4, 1886, 176 policemen stormed into the West Side market district to quell a riotous demonstration over the slaying of a participant in an earlier labor demonstration. An assassin's bomb killed 7 and injured 60 policemen.)

Wallace returned to the city where he announced his candidacy nine months ago to find that the State Supreme Court an hour earlier had slammed the door on Progressive hopes of getting its State and national tickets on the State ballot.

He assailed the decisions in a speech prepared for delivery tonight at a party rally at Wrigley Field. Party leaders expected a crowd of 38,000, paying 60 cents to $2.40 for admission.

"If they destroy your right to vote for the Progressive Party," he said, "they subject you to taxation without representation. They take your property without due process of law. . . they wipe out your freedom of assembly—they threaten new bloody Fridays, new Haymarkets. . ."

The Illinois Supreme Court today refused, without comment, to review a State electoral board's ruling that the Progressive nominating petitions are legally inadequate.

Playground Race Bar Upheld

The District of Columbia Recreation Board yesterday stood pat on its playground segregation policy and lashed out at recent effort by the Young Progressives of America to challenge it.

The meeting was interrupted midway as a small group of Progressives filed silently into the room hoping "to present the case in relation to the Rosedale playground."

A few minutes later, after the board had voted unanimously to deny them their request, the group walked out of the meeting to picket it. Board member Alice C. Hunter refrained from voting. Before and after their arrival, Chairman Harry S. Wender charged the Progressives and Young Progressives with using the segregation policy to aid their political ends. "This matter is not a political football," he declared.

The meeting, held at recreation department headquarters, 3149 16th st. n.w., began at 2:30 p. m. with a recital by Miss Sybil Baker, acting superintendent, of the Young Progressives' attempts to bring Negroes into Rosedale playground.

She reported that on August 28 and subsequent occasions the group had been turned away at the playground gates by playground personnel.

Since the group began its efforts, Wender interpolated, William Capitan, acting executive secretary of the Progressive Party, had tried repeatedly to talk with Wender personally—which is contrary to board policy, he asserted.

Wender pointed out that the board holds two meetings a year to hear citizens' and civic groups on recreation policy. But, he added, referring to the Progressive Party and the Young Progressives, "this is a political party."

17 Aircraft Hunt U. S. Plane Missing in Manitoba Wastes

Winnipeg, Sept. 14 (AP).—Seventeen planes and 100 men were called into the search today for a United States Navy twin-engine aircraft missing since Sunday in the barren bushland of northern Manitoba.

Wing Comdr. A. Walmsley, Royal Canadian Air Force operations officer, said every contingency is being taken into account in the search.

He said there was a possibility that Lieut. Charles Wilcox, United States Navy pilot of the plane, might have "over-corrected" while flying the 450 miles from Churchill to the Pas.

"We have looked where he should be and now we are looking where he shouldn't be," said Walmsley.

Others aboard the plane included Capt. Benjamin Scott Custer of 8 Oxford st., Chevy Chase, Md., naval attaché to the United States Embassy in Ottawa, and Capt. Sir Robert Stirling-Hamilton, naval adviser to the British High Commissioner in Ottawa.

Also aboard are Chief Petty Officer Jack M. Kastner, a naval pilot, and Staff Sgt. Jerome Scallie of Fort Belvoir, Va., who was a passenger being flown south from the Manitoba port on the rim of Hudson Bay.

At least two Dakota aircraft have swept the track of the flight planned by the missing plane.

U. S. Hospital Funds Sought

30, plus an additional $276,000 a year for the next four years.)

The Gallinger move is not expected to jeopardize Children's Hospital request for funds, but may delay actual grant of the funds until the District's application is threshed out. Children's Hospital formally applied for the grant in March, and officials have since protested that continuing delay in the face of rising construction costs may cut into their building plans.

No previous mention of a request for Hill-Burton Act funds for Gallinger construction has been made, although a proposal for erection of a new pediatrics and crippled children's building was discussed by the District Appropriations Subcommittee of the Senate.

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho) suggested combining a new pediatrics building with a replacement for the present crippled children's building after a study of children's hospitals in other cities was made.

The city already has $820,000 from earlier appropriations for a new pediatrics building, which will be applied to the combined structure. In addition, the House, in the past regular session, allowed $300,000 in new cash for a pediatrics building to cost $1,610,000. The provision for new cash was knocked out by the Senate group, to be deferred until future appropriations.

A third application is from Dr. Henry G. Hadley for $283,000 to complete building a 60-bed hospital in the 4600 block of Nichols ave. sw. already under construction.

Lower Prices For Clothing

Newark, Sept. 14 (P).—Two leaders in the men's clothing industry today called for lower prices as a means of boosting sales volume.

Jerome I. Udell, president of Udell Sons & Co., clothing manufacturers, told the New Jersey Clothiers and Furnishers Association that "it is time to take fundamental principles of run-

"It has been proven again and again," Udell said, "that the increased volume of sales grows out of a lower markup percentage will return a greater net profit. Retail profits are not too high."

all profits are not too high, a lower gross markup, which result in a healthy turnover, maximum use of equipment, inventory and personnel, and necessarily a greater net profit to the retailer.

Max J. Lovell, director of counsel of the National Association of Shirt & Pajama Manufacturers, told the association meeting that with living costs high "the answer is that prices must be brought more realistic within the ability of the consumer to pay."

"A family man who earns a week cannot pay $35 for a pair of clothes," Lovell added.

He said the shirt and pajama industries are going through an adjustment period which should reach the point where consumers will be buying in quantities the industry can produce.

7 District Men

Classified 1-A By Draft Board

District Draft Board No. 1 yesterday placed seven Washington men in Class 1-A (available for military service) as classification of registrants for the peacetime draft began.

Davis B. Willis, board chairman, predicted that "all of the men classified 1-A won't stick" for occupational or physical reasons. Board No. 1 classified 25 men yesterday, he said.

Regulations provide that registrants who wish to appeal their classification must do so within 10 days after the date the local board mails the notice of classification. Men classified yesterday probably will receive their notices Thursday.

Men born in 1929 will register today and Thursday. The registration period will end Friday and Saturday with men born in 1930 before September 19.

A total of 44,518 men from 18 through 25 have registered since the signing-up period began August 30. Frank D. Norton, deputy District draft director, announced yesterday. Questionnaires have been mailed to 2942 men, he said.

Norton said that "classification doesn't mean very much at this point" while the District has received a quota of 55 men for opening inductions in November. Norton pointed out that most of the men now being classified are being deferred for various reasons.

A list of the various classifications into which men may be placed, together with a brief explanation of each, follows:

- Class 1-A: Available for military service.
- Class 1-B: Member of the armed forces, including the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Public Health Service.
- Class 1-C: Member of a reserve component taking military training.
- Class 2-A: Deferred because of civilian employment, except agriculture.
- Class 2-B: Deferred because of employment in agriculture.
- Class 3-A: Deferred because of dependent.
- Class 4-A: Registrant who has completed service; sole surviving son of a family in which one or more sons or daughters were killed in action.
- Class 4-B: Official deferred by law.
- Class 4-C: Minister of religion or divinity.
- Class 4-D: Conscientious objector opposed to both combatant and noncombatant military service.
- Class 4-E: Physically, mentally or morally unfit.
- Class 5: Registrant over the age of liability for military service.

Dredging of Channel to Stop Park Reverting to Swampland

Army Engineers have started operations to keep the 327-acre East Potomac Park from reverting to swampland.

A 50-acre diked area in the northwest section of Hains Point will be the site of silt pumping operations when the President's Cup Regatta winds up September 26.

Dredging operations in the channel have been held up pending completion of the regatta.

The dredging will serve a two-fold purpose, in that the operation to insure the continuance of shipping will also result in silt being made available for the land reclamation program.

The long-range plan calls for the filling-in of the entire East Potomac Park, areas of which, including portions of the golf course, are showing signs of waterlogging.

National Capital Parks officials would not estimate the length of time required for the entire operation, saying it depends on how dredging progresses.

They said fishing in the Potomac would not be affected by the project.

Typhoon Approaching, Jap Islands Warned

Tokyo, Japan, Sept. 14 (U.P.)—

The Japanese islands of Honshu and Kyushu were warned today to expect a typhoon within the next few days. Reports said the storm tonight was centered 200 miles south of Okinawa with maximum surface winds of 70 m.p.h.

Meanwhile, more than 90 persons were reported dead and 3000 homes flooded as a result of heavy week-end rainstorms in Nagasaki and Saga prefectures.

August Auto Deaths in Area Jump to 13; Down in District

Traffic deaths in Greater Washington jumped to 13 in August from 8 in July, while the total number of accidents and of persons injured fell off in the District.

The total of deaths was three less than for August, 1947.

The 1393 area traffic accidents last month compared with 1442 in July and 1300 in August, 1947. Total area injured last month was 556, compared to 603 the previous month and 538 in August, 1947.

The August figures brought the eight-month total for the area to 11,365 accidents, 4062 persons injured and 102 deaths, compared to 9516 accidents, 4072 injuries and 116 deaths for the corresponding period in 1947.

For the sixth successive month, Alexandria reported no fatal traffic accident. Arlington County had its second straight month without a traffic fatality.

The figures, as compiled from police records, show:

Do YOU think SURPRISE DEALS have any place in Our Government?

The telegrams and statements reproduced here tell the story of a Surprise Deal on the part of the War Assets Administration. Your government property was leased to Kaiser-Frazer in secrecy that closed the door to open bidding. The War Assets Administration made it impossible for The Wheland Company to know that this lease or sale was being considered. We are not fighting Kaiser-Frazer. We do most emphatically object to the "denial of rights" in the handling of this transaction and feel that the lease should be cancelled.

FRANK W. BOYKIN
BY CHIEF, ALABAMA

Congress of the United States House of Representatives Washington, D. C.

Statement of Frank W. Boykin
Congressman, Mobile, Alabama
To Associated Press and U.P. and Trade Publications on August 27, 1948.

It is my opinion that Jess Larson, Administrator of War Assets Administration, in making a lease with Kaiser-Frazer for the blast furnace at Cleveland, Ohio on August 16, 1948, definitely disregarded the intent of Congress, if he did not actually violate the law. I have asked that this lease be cancelled.

Attached is a copy of telegram from The Wheland Company dated August 24 which is self explanatory. Mr. Street was called to Washington August 25th to testify before a joint session of Senator Wherry's Small Business Committee and Congressman Bender's Procurement and Building Committee. Unfortunately, this joint session was indefinitely recessed before Mr. Street's arrival in Washington. He left with Mr. Thomas M. Cooley, Associate Counsel for Mr. Bender's Committee, a sworn statement.

Mr. Larson granted Mr. Street an audience at five o'clock Thursday afternoon August 26th. He expressed regret in not knowing of the Wheland Company's interest in the Cleveland blast furnace and apologized for the failure of his subordinates to inform him of that interest. Mr. Larson, however, does not explain why his subordinates knew nothing of his personal negotiations with Kaiser-Frazer. He admitted that was the situation, however, and that it was an unusual one. Congress set up a Board of Review in the War Assets Administration to review and approve such transactions but Mr. Larson apparently ignored them also.

Everyone who wishes to should be given an opportunity to bid on property which has cost the Government $29,000,000. This lease would never have been executed in such secrecy if Congress had been in Session. Let's turn the light on such deals. I'm fighting and I am doing everything possible to break such things up.

MR. JESS LARSON, ADMINISTRATOR
WAR ASSETS ADMINISTRATION, TEMPORARY BUILDING I
WASHINGTON, D. C.

AUGUST 24, 1948

On July 20 your Mr. A. C. Walton advised our Charles A. Gwin that no immediate action was to be taken regarding the disposal or lease of blast furnace and facilities at Cleveland for 60 or 90 days. On August 11 your Mr. Curran advised our Mr. F. H. Stephens that no plans were being considered for disposal of these same facilities. This was again confirmed in conversation on August 16 with your Col. J. H. Williams. The explanation of your action by Mr. Ellis to our Mr. Stephens and Senator Kenneth D. McKellar on August 20 is still unsatisfactory. Stoppage of the flow of pig iron from this furnace would disrupt production in our foundry and hundreds of others with consequent serious repercussions on employment and production. This would immediately be reflected in disruption of production schedules and stoppage in businesses dependent on castings from these various foundries. In view of the above we ask that lease with Kaiser-Frazer be immediately cancelled. As operators of one of the nation's largest production foundries we hereby offer to lease the property known as Plancon 257 at a price of One Hundred Thousand Dollars more than the price you offered the same facilities to Kaiser-Frazer on August 16. Since we have been and are a customer of Republic Steel we feel confident that a mutually satisfactory agreement can be worked out between their organization and our own to assure uninterrupted production and shipments.

AUGUST 26, 1948 Johnson City, Tenn.

Understand that bid of Wheland Company of Chattanooga for the blast furnace at Cleveland was for One Hundred Thousand more per year with option to buy at a higher price than provided for in the Kaiser-Frazer lease. The Wheland bid was submitted after Wheland was advised by high officials of your office that no lease was in prospect. Wheland has been customer of Cleveland plants and turning this furnace over to an outside user such as Kaiser-Frazer and thereby making its output unavailable will seriously interfere with production and labor at Chattanooga and elsewhere. In view of the substantial higher bid by Wheland the interruption of production and apparent secret dealing with Kaiser-Frazer by someone it would appear urgent this lease be cancelled so as to protect the interest of the Government and our economy which I urge be done at once. Please advise.

Cocteau's 'Beast' Enchants Adults

By Richard L. Coe

AN ENCHANTING FAIRY TALE comes to the Little this morning with the arrival of Jean Cocteau's "Beauty and the Beast," a fairy tale, let it be quickly added, for adults.

And by stating "for adults," I don't mean that Cocteau's imaginative film is ooh-la-la in the Folies Bergere manner. No, this reworking of a story you all know is wondrously childlike, but childlike in the manner that only adults can understand. There is about its naive patina of civilization, a gloss of experience endured that will enchant the wise and confound the foolish.

Cocteau has given us the story of the three sisters, two of them vain, the third good as she is beautiful, and of their father, who meets a monster in a forest. This monster, who insists he be called "the Beast," tells the father that only by sacrificing one of his daughters can he be saved from death. Arrived home, the old man relates his experiences and sinks into a faint. Before he has recovered, Beauty has set out to give herself to the Beast.

The Beast, she discovers, is kindness itself, endowed with the finest of human virtues, but still a Beast—and at times a most blood-thirsty one. She comes to respect him, to like him, but always unable to refuse his one request—that she become his bride.

As the understanding between Beauty and the Beast grows, he gives her permission to visit her ailing father for one week, entrusting with her the secrets of his magic but assuring her that if she is late in returning, he will die. Her wicked sisters, her conniving brother and the young man whom she has long loved but has always refused because she did not want to leave her father—all conspire to discover her secrets and to kill her captor. The rest you know, how the Beast turns into a handsome man, symbolically resembling her old lover, who now lies dead in his effort to discover the Beast's magical secrets—dead and in the guise of the Beast.

Marais' Excellent Performance

Cocteau has told the story almost entirely in pictures. A poet using the movies in their essential role, he has ingeniously caught the magic of a dreamworld. In the Beast's castle bodiless hands light Beauty's way down shadowy halls with massive candelabra and serve her at her lonely meals. Carved heads, with human eyes, take note of everything that happens; a magic horse, magnificent, needs only the right phrase for his mysterious journeys, and the moss of age covers The Beast's estate.

While one may read much into it, particularly in the humanity of the Beast—all this delightful adjectives; a magic horse, magnificent, needs only the right phrase for his mysterious journeys, and the moss of age covers The Beast's estate.

"BEAUTY AND THE BEAST"—Jeanette Day and Jean Marais in the title roles of the Jean Cocteau fantasy opening this morning on the Little screen

First New Sex Law Conviction

A 38-year-old cleaning store manager yesterday was found guilty in District Court of taking immoral, improper and indecent liberties with a 9-year-old girl.

He was James Y. Cathcart, who came here from Florida during the summer to take an extension course at the National Institute of Cleaning and Dyeing in Silver Spring, Md. He faces a maximum sentence of 10 years.

The offense occurred July 24 in the 4200 block of Arkansas ave. n.w., where Cathcart parked his car next to the curb and molested the little girl, who stood by the open car door, according to testimony offered yesterday.

Judge Jennings Bailey, in instructing the jury, pointed out that it was understood this was the first trial under the new Miller Act, which makes an offense of that kind of crime. The jury deliberated less than a half hour before returning a verdict. No date was set for sentencing.

On the Town

ALL the rush and bustle of the Miss American beauty pageant is over, the queen has been crowned, the scholarships and prizes have been awarded and the Atlantic City Chamber of Commerce is probably thinking of next year's contest already. The whole affair can be termed a success this year. The production of the whole show was something to behold. The suspense, especially for the girls, was a true touch of showmanship. All in all Gerri Gale, the winner of the Miss American beauty pageant, is shown in a portrait. She is a young woman with dark hair, wearing a light-colored dress.

Just think of the broken hearted commercial companies who make a habit of getting Miss America's name and face in their ads. That would be a sight to behold. You, too, can look like this if you use the girls this year didn't match up to the beauties of last year, an opinion that was pretty much general. Much pro and con came out on this question. Many of the people attending the pageant thought beauty alone should choose the queen, others thought the mixture of talent, charm and beauty was fine. We're forced to agree with the latter opinion in that the name Miss America alone implies a cross section of the country. If the girl were to be truly typical of American womanhood, the pageant wouldn't draw nearly the crowd because, according to a poll, the average American woman is a little on the short side, tends to be a bit broad in the beam and is rather flat chested. (Of course, we don't mean you!)

Livery soap. But who'd want to look like that? That settled, we'll move on to Miss Nation's Capital, who was the real purpose of the trip. Quite a schedule was planned for Ruth Smallwood (who was Miss Nation's Capital). The party stayed in the Brighton Hotel as the guests of Alan M. Graff, president, and Bernard Cooley, executive assistant. The two gentlemen were very lavish with the plans. Dinner in the hotel, an evening in the famous Punch Bowl (the room that is), and believe us when we say that Brighton punch is nothing for children to play with, swimming in the hotel's Cabana Club pool. There was a delicious steak dinner at Char-bett's, the coronation ball, after a bit of difficulty, and a lot of other entertainment, came back, courtesy of brother Johnson, tired but happy. A word of thanks to Al Walters for arranging the whole trip.

TOMORROW night will see the opening of the Continental Balalaika. The spot has undergone a face lifting, the stage has been widened and the kitchen improved. The policies will be a little different in that they'll be featuring more things that are found on the Riviera than in the typical Russian clubs. The opening show will consist of Gerri Gale, a cute little New York ballerina, who's just back from the Riviera. Johnny Gene will baritone it, and Frances Cameron, who just missed out on the Miss Washington contest, will sing with Sasha Bartnowsky's string orchestra.

The annual orchids and champagne dance at the Mayflower is

Bus Service Is Expedited

The Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co., yesterday announced a service speed-up on its Falls Church line—the first such acceleration since the bus line was reorganized last January.

All schedule changes announced go into effect this morning. Major change revealed by E. G. Crandon, the line's general manager, is on the 3-F route between 11th and E sts. nw. and West Falls Church. Beginning today, buses on this route will operate at 10-minute intervals, during the morning 7-8:30 rush, instead of 12-15 minutes as in the past. Midday service, formerly operated at 30-minute intervals, will be increased to one bus every 20 minutes.

During the 4-6:30 p. m. rush hour, buses on the 3-F line will operate every 12 minutes instead of 15.

Two through express buses will begin service tomorrow between 11th and F sts. and East Falls Church. They will leave Washington at 5:05 and 5:35 p. m., making their last stop at 33d and M sts. nw.

Night service on the 3-F route will be stepped up from the past 30-minute intervals to about 15 minutes between buses today.

On the line's 3-G route between 11th and E sts. nw. and Garden City (27th and N. Florida sts., Arlington), midday service will be increased, with buses operating at 20 instead of 30-minute intervals.

All midday service on Route 3 along Lee hwy., east of Florida st., will be increased with 15 to 10-minute intervals between buses.

Blazers Open With Tech in New Stadium

Three years ago, young Montgomery Blair High of Silver Spring fielded its first football team, two years ago it began building its own stadium, and last year, it drew up its first he-man schedule.

This year, Blair has its stadium completed, a man-sized schedule, and possibly its finest team. Just how it compares with the other teams in the area will be indicated Saturday when the Blazers open in their stadium against McKinley Tech, Washington's 1947 public high champion.

No matter how it fares in the opener, Blair figures to improve on its 2-7 record of last year. Standing in the way, however, are such power teams as St. John's, Gonzaga and Bethesda - Chevy Chase.

Coach Reno Continetti has his whole backfield plus three reserves back from last year, including Bob Cushman, All-Maryland fullback. He also has experienced men at every line position except at one tackle and center. Blair's biggest handicap is a scarcity of proved line reserves.

The Blazers got a lucky break when Jimmy Downs moved to Silver Spring from Washington and transferred to Blair. Downs, a fast, rangy, glue-fingered end, was sparkplug of Coolidge's Jayvee team last year, and is fitting snugly into Continetti's plans.

Continetti thinks he's solved his center problem by moving John Kennedy, a tackle last year, to snapback. To the vacant tackle spot, Continetti dispatched Bob Davis, a regular end in '47. Veteran Tuck Richards is the other end.

Guard assignments go to Walt Chamblin and Dick Harrison, the latter an All-State second team selection. In the backfield with Cushman, a 10-second speedster, Blair has Halbacks Ray Luckett and Bob Theofield, and Quarterback Billy Mess. Mess, at 185, is the team's biggest player. Luckett is the triple-threat of the single-wing attack.

High School Series Begins

These stories are the first in a series on Washington and area high school teams and their prospects for the 1948 football season.

Grace Gains Semifinals in Publix Play

James Grace yesterday found himself in the championship flight semifinal round of the District Public Links golf tournament in which he was lucky to be playing at all.

Grace submitted his entry blank to Manager T. J. Gibra'ki at East Potomac Park just five minutes before the deadline. Having barely gotten in, Grace then had to fight for a spot in the championship flight, finally winning out with George Graham in a playoff against Thomas Emmons for the two available berths.

Yesterday, he kept right on winning, first over Ralph McGonigle, 1 up, 20 holes, and later over Pat Martino, 4 and 2. Grace will meet his stiffest opposition yet this morning against Sgt. Tom Burch, runner-up in the Air Forces championship.

The mighty were falling hard yesterday. Medalist Joe Ramirez was an easy quarterfinal victim before Burch, 6 and 5. Earl Marcey, the only former Public Links (11st) playing, was also eliminated, 2 up, by J. J. Kotvan, and Lieut. Ed Lewis, Jr., another highly regarded Air Forces golfer, was a first-round casualty, losing to Martino, 4 and 2.

Both the semifinals and finals will be played today at the East Potomac course.

First Round
Joe Ramirez defeated Joe Abood, 3 and 2.
Thomas Burch defeated Julian Williams, 1 up.
Pat Martino defeated Ed Lewis, Jr., 4 and 2.
James Grace defeated Ralph McGonigle, 1 up, 20 holes.
Earl Marcey defeated George Pigott, 8 and 7.
J. J. Kotvan defeated William Swan, 3 and 4.
Samuel Carter defeated Tracy Pigott, 1 up.
George Graham defeated John Bowers, 3 and 2.

Second Round
Thomas Burch defeated Joe Ramirez, 6 and 5.
James Grace defeated Pat Martino, 4 and 2.
J. J. Kotvan defeated Earl Marcey, 2 up.
George Graham defeated Samuel Carter, 4 and 3.

Third Round
Norman Burch defeated William Hurley, default.
Robert Rhodes defeated Cecil Wilson, 1 up.
Bernard Reinhold defeated Billy DeWense, 6 and 5.
Carl Steele defeated Thomas Emmons, 4 up, 18 holes.
Jack Bowers defeated John Cantrell, default.
Richard Davis defeated Edmund Talbot, 1 up.
Fred Allen defeated L. W. Heller, 1 up.

Fourth Round
Robert Rhodes defeated Norman Burch, 7 and 6.
Bernard Reinhold defeated Carl Steele, 1 up.
Jack Bowers defeated Fred Allen, 6 and 4.
Richard Davis defeated Fred Allen, 6 and 4.

Coach Carlo Tops All as Pessimist

Woodrow Wilson High has only an outside chance of coping the interhigh football championship this year, but its coach, Joe Carlo, has already clinched the title as champion of pessimistic coaches.

The usually reticent Carlo is outspoken in his description of his team's talents. "Horrible, terrible, lackadaisical, and lazy," is the way he pictures the 1948 Green Tiger eleven.

"We won only one out of nine games last year, and will do worse this year," he continued. "I can't explain what's the matter with the boys. I've tried complimenting 'em, and then telling 'em they're awful, but it doesn't help. They don't seem to care."

Carlo is so low on his team that he says he won't issue game uniforms until Friday, the day Wilson opens up against Georgetown Prep at Wilson.

Sixty-five youngsters originally turned up for practice, but 25 of those quit because of the heat. Of those left, only two, Baker Smith and Olet Cooper, both ends, are lettermen. And Smith is the only one fairly sure of a job.

The Wilson squad is lacking in weight, the biggest boy being 180-pound Dick Baughman, a tackle. Linemen run as light as 135-pound Guard Charles Woodley.

The Tigers will use some "T" and some single wing, with Quarterback Jack Riley the spearhead. He's a good punter and passer. Leo Speros is the fullback, and battling it out for the halfback posts are George Papafotis, Garry Quinn, Jack Sweigard and Don Meany.

Pressing Smith and Cooper for end jobs are Bud Scott, Allen Sher and Dick Barrett. Tackle candidates are Baughman, Ken Moore and Alvin Solomon. Guards are Wooley, Tom Hall and Pete Dressler. Leading the fight for starting center berth are Jim Moore and Buddy Pardo.

Barker Joins Tigers
Charles Town, W. Va., Sept. 14. Harry Barker, outstanding hurler for the Charles Town American Legion independent team and also for Shepherd College at Shepherdstown, W. Va., former star athlete at Harpers Ferry (W. Va.) High, will go to Detroit to work out with the Tigers of the American League.

Rowland Will Learn What G. W. Team Is Like Saturday

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Coach Bo Rowland becomes acquainted with his George Washington football team Saturday at Wake Forest. Until then, he's keeping mum on the Colonials' chances.

"I've never seen these boys under fire," says the new coach. "All I know is that a few of them have shown talent, and that we're lacking reserve strength."

On the surface, the 1948 Colonials look little different from the team which won only one out of nine games last year.

Most of last year's boys are running first in the race for starting berths, and there are even three spots which appear weaker than last year.

Carl Butkus' graduation to the (Editor's Note: This story is one of a series on football prospects at major colleges in this area.)

New York Yankees has opened a gaping hole at tackle. Don Druckenmiller, last last year's No. 1 center, is out of the picture because of an injury. And graduations have cost G. W. its best two blocking backs.

To fill in the holes, Rowland has moved over players from other positions. He's grooming Talbot Dredge, 205-pound guard, for the center spot. Stan Burak, a 190-pound end last year, will share the blocking back job with Bill Spangler, last year's fullback.

Jim Feula, a 190-pound second-stringer last year, and Fred Samuelson, a 207-pounder who has never played college ball, are fighting for the tackle job, left by the 245-pound Butkus.

There's no evidence that G. W. has overcome its weakness on pass defense which cost it most of its games last year.

Joe Buell and Dick Koester, alternating at tailback, and Andy Davis and Joe Bernot at fullback, promise to give the Colonials better than average running and passing. Spangler and John Shullenbarger will give them excellent punting. Jimmy Kline and Al Du-

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Klutts

Resolution Proposes Rating for 300,000 War Service Workers

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 14.—A resolution that proposes that the 300,000 war service employees be given the opportunity to become permanent status employees by a rating on their education and experience was put before the National Federation of Federal Employees at its convention here. Action on it will be taken in a day or so.

The resolution is of particular interest to those war service people who are fearful of losing their jobs—and many have already lost them because they failed the competitive tests. The White House has had under serious study a plan that would blanket many of them with several years of satisfactory service into the competitive Civil Service system. However, Civil Service officials and GOP members of Congress opposed the move.

The proposal before the independent and powerful NFFE could possibly be used as a compromise. It raises no objection to competitive tests for war service people, but it urges that all such examinations be assembled, or unwritten. In other words, it urges that the war service people be rated largely on their work records.

A score of pending resolutions have to do with annual and sick leave. Several oppose any of the many proposals under study by the Senate and House Civil Service Committees to restrict leave. Others would require the Government to make cash payments to employees for unused sick leave.

THE CONVENTION today voted down a well-supported resolution that would have made the NFFE an "organization" instead of a "union."

John Gastelum of Santa Fe, N. Mex., said that many people have no respect for unions and that many Federal workers had refused to join the NFFE because it was officially a "union." President Luther C. Steward answered the "union" critics. He said: "We are a union and no word we could use would cover it up." To change union to organization, he said, would be "a bit of camouflage."

Earlier, the convention heard Arthur S. Flemming, the former GOP Civil Service commissioner who is now president of Ohio Wesleyan University.

He suggested more effective consultation between Federal administrators and employee representatives—conferences that he said would bring about immense gains in the over-all administrative efficiency. He pointed out that there are more than 500,000 Federal placements a year as a result of turnover alone and that this was due in part to dissatisfaction over working conditions.

"The present situation with respect to these positions," he said, "is indefensible from the standpoint of good government."

Flemming also urged more encouragement to employees to make suggestions for the good of Government. He said that many workers were reluctant to make suggestions because they are afraid they won't be accepted in the proper spirit.

AIR FORCE Personnel Director Gordon Clark revealed his agency had recently instituted a new investigative program for its employees, which makes a clear distinction between security and loyalty cases. He said "the Air Force is extremely conscious of the great responsibility of protecting the interests of the Government from disloyal employees or employees who constitute unwarranted risks to our security."

At the same time, Clark told the convention, "we are also conscious of the obligation not to unjustly accuse or remove employees." He said the new AF regulations protect both the employee and the Government.

Admiral Paul H. Nibeker, the Navy's industrial relations head, told the delegates that the Navy finds its highly desirable to deal with organized groups since "we feel reasonably sure that we are getting solid opinions on pressing employee problem and not the opinion of a few individuals who may have axes to grind."

The adoption of uniform procedures and policies for the entire Federal Government was advocated by A. Heath Onthank, the Army's civilian personnel chief. He also called attention to the need for greater delegation of authority down the line and the pressing necessity for developing supervisory officials of high intelligence and constructive initiative.

Congestion Found Worst In Outlying D. C. Schools

Many Classes Put On Half-Day Basis; Total Attendance Lags Behind 1947

The full extent of school overcrowding in newer areas of Washington was revealed yesterday with publication of detailed registration figures.

In one school, all grades but two were placed on part time. In others, substantial waiting lists for kindergarten classes and lower grades were reported.

Schools showed an attendance of 86,808 or 3696 more pupils than recorded on opening day.

Enrollments, however, continued to lag behind a year ago. On the second day of school in 1947 there were 88,152 students in Washington schools.

Miss Dorothy Lewis, principal of the Kimball School, Minnesota ave. and Ely pl. se., said that all grades but the fifth and sixth are on half-day schedules. The school has a capacity of 300 students and an enrollment of 610.

A Waiting List of 85

Eighty children are enrolled in two kindergarten classes and 85 are on the waiting list. Two sixth grades with 41 students each are enrolled above capacity.

Dr. Clara L. Pitts, principal of the Beers School, Alabama ave. and 36th pl. se., said some parents are withdrawing children to enter them in private and parochial schools. All grades through the fourth are on half-day programs.

At the Congress Heights Elementary School, 5th st. and Nichols ave. se., 320 of the school's 823 students are on part-time. Twenty-five students are in the kindergarten waiting list, the principal, Miss E. M. Trusheim, said.

Eight First Grades

At the Patterson Elementary School, South Capitol and Harrison sts. sw., the principal, Miss Florence M. Painter, said that eight first grades have been set up, all on part-time.

At the Young Elementary School, 24th st. and Benning rd. ne., the principal, Mrs. Martha H. Winston, reported an enrollment of 995 students.

A. Kiger Savoy, associate superintendent of schools, said that the Young may have to resort to part-time programs to accommodate the students.

There are 90 students in two kindergarten sections and 70 more are on a waiting list. The school has two first grade classes. Seventy-two students are enrolled in one and 74 in the other.

36 Set as Maximum

School officials have set 36 as the maximum number of students to be taught in any one classroom. Arlington schools opened yesterday for 11,838 pupils, about 500 more than were in classes at the close of school last spring. Arlington School Consultant Edward J. Braun expects enrollment will reach a peak of 13,000 during the school year.

In Montgomery County, where schools opened Monday, school officials said enrollment was 20,335, an increase of 1960 above last year. Bulk of the increase was in white elementary schools where the attendance of 12,416 was up 1426 students over last year.

Enrollment in white secondary schools was 6030, an increase of 531 students; in Negro secondary schools 531, an increase of 65 students.

Three elementary schools in the county reported enrollment increases of from 150 to 200 students. They were the Woodlin with an enrollment of 402 as compared with 245 a year ago; the Takoma Park with 804 against 645 last year, and the Lynnbroom with 538 and 351 a year ago.

Assistant Schools Superintendent Edgar M. Douglas said at present there is no serious overcrowding. During the summer a four-room addition to the Lynnbroom School was completed and five new classrooms were added to the Woodlin School.

When large subdivisions now under construction are opened to residents, it is possible that some schools may go on half day programs, he said.

D. C. Totals Listed

District enrollment figures for yesterday showed 877 students in the two teacher colleges; 36 in the Capitol Page School; 13,926 students, including 689 veterans, in the high schools; 16,213 in the vocational high schools; 18,213 in the junior high schools; and 52,130 in the elementary schools.

Attendance in the white schools was 46,273 and in the Negro schools 40,535. The white schools showed a loss of 2069 students as compared with last year and the Negro schools an increase of 725.

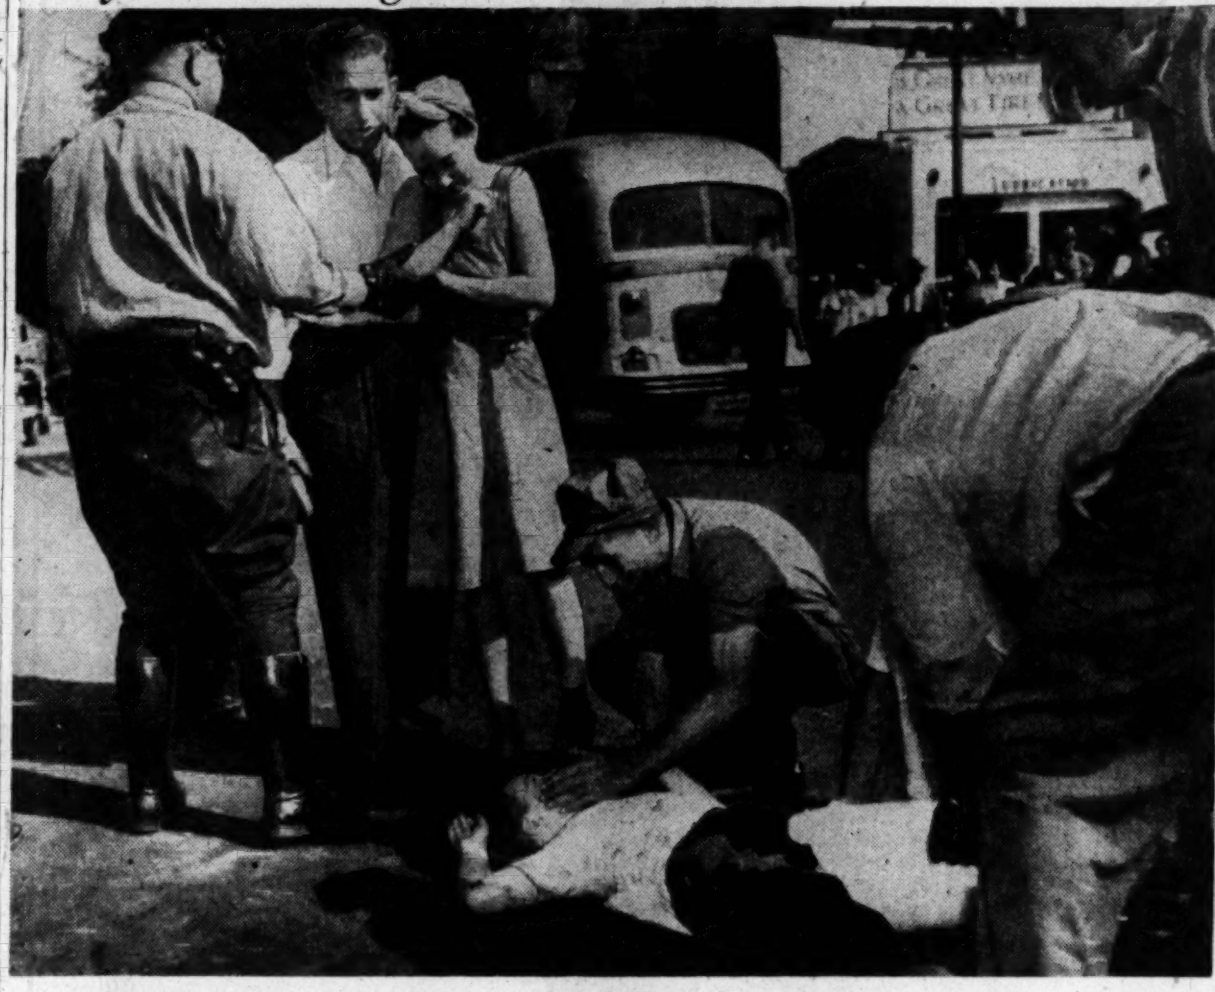

Columbus Day Rites Called for by Truman

President Truman called yesterday for Nation-wide observance of October 12 as a Columbus Day.

In a proclamation, Mr. Truman said the discoverer of America "broadened the world's horizons through his keen vision, his indomitable spirit, and his unflagging persistence."

Mr. Truman also asked observance of the week beginning October 3 as "National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week."

Police reported that the youth was returning home yesterday afternoon from his second day at the Thomson School and that he ran

New Attack On Colasanto By Beverley

Alexandria City Councilman Marshall J. Beverley gave the city council's first meeting an explosive sendoff last night by demanding the resignation of City Manager Nicholas A. Colasanto.

Claiming that Colasanto has "absolutely failed" in his 10 months as city manager, Beverley said that unless Colasanto quit "in the very near future" he would ask the council to remove him.

Beverly told the council his investigation showed the city's finances to be "desperate" and the city government "poorly and ineptly administered." Since Colasanto took office, he said, the situation has "gradually grown worse."

Beverly claimed the people voted in the at-large form of election to elect councilmen last March as a reaction against Colasanto's appointment. He said the voters' mandate demands the city manager's speedy removal.

Colasanto Defended

Colasanto, who sat almost across the table from Beverley, made no answer. But the three holdover members from the old council, Mayor William T. Wilkins, R. Samuel Luckett, and John W. Tulloch, all retorted warmly to Beverley's charges.

They all agreed with Luckett, who said of Colasanto: "He may not be the best city manager you have ever had, but you'll never have another one who will work as hard for the city."

Afterwards, Colasanto, asked by a reporter if he would resign, replied: "Of course I won't resign." Luckett, chairman of the council's finance committee, told Beverley and a crowd of about 100 spectators that the city's finances are in a better condition today than they have been for years.

Beverly offered a resolution calling for a complete audit of all city accounts and a survey of all city inventories as of September 1. His motion was defeated 4 to 3.

He also read a letter from the Lynchburg, Va., investment firm of Scott, Horner & Mason, Inc., which said that Beverley's attacks on the city government in the past few weeks have hurt the sales of Alexandria's $5,250,000 bond issue.

Both Wilkins and Luckett voted against Colasanto's appointment last year.

Resolutions Adopted

The Council then got down to its scheduled business and adopted unanimously four resolutions offered by Councilman Leroy S. Bendheim. The resolutions:

1. Informed city department heads of the council's intentions to adhere strictly to the city charter amendment which brought most departments under control of the city manager.

2. Requested Alexandria's delegation to the Virginia General Assembly to sponsor a bill giving the city a police and fire trial board.

3. Asked the finance committee to study the advisability of setting up a separate department of finance.

4. Requested appointment of a committee to study advisability of establishing a municipal civil service system for certain classes of city employees.

The council directed the mayor to set up a seven-member commission to make an overall study of the city's charter.

The council elected Tulloch vice mayor. The following appointments were made by Mayor Wilkins:

Finance committee—chairman: Luckett; members, Albert A. Smoot and Bendheim. Street naming committee—chairman: Tulloch; members, Beverley and Roy C. Bragg. School committee—chairman:

Two Fringe Auto Parking Lots To Begin Operations Monday

By Sam Zagoria

Post Reporter

Fringe parking lots, one of the first major attempts to solve the District's downtown parking problem, will begin operations Monday at 9:15 a. m. it was decided yesterday.

The fare on the shuttle buses will be 10 cents cash, or the weekly transit passes may be used. At present, the Heurich lot is being leveled and covered with an asphalt mixture. Plans are being made for the launching of an advertising campaign Friday explaining how the plan will work.

Original plans for the program called for establishment of three fringe lots, but one at Temple Heights, Connecticut and Florida aves. nw., has been delayed.

Additional lots are being studied with a view toward possible incorporation in the plan if the first efforts are successful.

The shuttle buses will be operated six days a week at 10-minute intervals between 9:15 a. m. and 5:15 p. m. At first, the CTC advocated elimination of all parking on F st. to expedite movement of buses on the street, but yesterday agreed to the elimination of a few parking meters to make way for corner bus stops.

The bus routes will run from the Heurich parking lot along F st., in front of the White House, then back on F st., turn on 8th to E st. to 3d st., where buses will pick up passengers on the Municipal Center lot and return via 6th to E, then on 8th to F st., along F by the White House and then along F st. to the Heurich parking lot.

The Capital Transit Co. received authority yesterday from the Public Utilities Commission to establish five bus stops on the north side of F st. They will be of 9th, 10th, 12th, 13th and 14th sts.

Four stops will be placed on the south side of F st. at points east of 10th, 11th, 13th and 14th. In addition, stops will be placed on E st. on the north and south side east of 8th st.

The fare on the shuttle buses will be 10 cents cash, or the weekly transit passes may be used. At present, the Heurich lot is being leveled and covered with an asphalt mixture. Plans are being made for the launching of an advertising campaign Friday explaining how the plan will work.

$11,870,000 School Program Approved by Arlington Group

Some 200 Arlington citizens attending a school board public hearing last night endorsed practically unanimously an $11,870,000 program of school construction and additions, which the board believes is needed over the next six years.

The plans were outlined by Dr. Edward J. Braun, consultant for the county school board, who said future school needs were indicated by the fact that there are 3000 more children under school age now in Arlington than there are children in the schools.

Those attending the meeting showed by hand voting that they favored authorizing $5,590,000 this fall for construction during the 1949-1952 period. The rest of the six-year program appropriation would be voted later, they indicated.

Petitions Circulated

Immediately after the meeting, petitions to provide a referendum in this fall's election were circulated. At least 100 signatures are required to place the issue on the ballot.

The discussion on Arlington County needs for a growing school population was held at Jefferson

Bar Unit Votes More Study on Civil Rights

Moves to end the police practice of holding persons for "investigation" and to force the immediate arraignment of all arrested without warrant for felonies were stymied last night at a meeting of the District Bar Association at the Mayflower.

The actions, favored by the association's civil rights committee, were ordered by a voice vote, recommended to a new civil rights committee appointed recently at the expiration of the one-year term of the old committee.

The first point of the program adopted by the old committee 9-4, called for pressure on the District Commissioners to instruct police authorities to discontinue the practice of arrests for "investigation."

The second recommendation called for an amendment to the District code whereby police would be obliged to take "forthwith" before a committing magistrate all persons arrested without a warrant on suspicion of felony.

Also under the proposed legislation, a committing magistrate could continue a case only once for 24 hours, "during which time (the suspect) shall be confined without charge in a place of detention other than a police station."

Austin F. Canfield, a former president of the association gave strength to the move for recommendation in stating: "If this is introduced in Congress, there are two men to whom it will be sent for comment, Vernon West (corporation counsel) and George Morris Fay (U. S. attorney for the District). . . if they oppose it, you don't have a chance of getting it adopted. I suggest the committee sit with West and Fay then give us something we know will have some chance . . ."

Junior High School and was sponsored by the school board.

The meeting was opened by Dr. Bernard Joy, board chairman, who said that a $1,776,000 bond issue voted last May would be sold by early October along with an issue of county incinerator bonds.

The proceeds from the October bond issue will be used to provide five new elementary schools, he said. Three will be located in North Arlington, Dominion Hills and on Little Falls rd., while the others will replace the Hume and Glen Carlynn schools.

Improvements Necessary

Dr. Joy also said the Hoffman-Boston school for Negroes would have to be improved and used as a junior and senior high school only, with elementary pupils to be accommodated in a proposed new building.

Dr. Braun's study of future needs included a $1,750,000 junior high school and a $250,000 Negro senior high school to be built in 1950-51. For the following year, a $750,000 gymnasium would be built for the Washington-Lee senior high school while a new senior high school building is envisaged for 1953-54.

County Treasurer John Locke Green challenged the ability of the county to pay for the six-year investment proposed, which would require bond issues of the stated amount. However, he said, if the bond issues are voted, he would do his best to see that taxes are collected.

Apartment Prowler Believed Wounded

A janitor of 1765 N st. nw., told police last night he fired at and believed he wounded a prowler he spotted outside the apartment house. Police listed the janitor as George E. Brown, 38, of the N st. nw. address.

Home builders of Metropolitan Washington were told yesterday that the Federal Housing Administration will accept no more applications for Government insurance on mortgages on multi-family dwellings in the high-price field.

Col. James A. Hewitt, area administrator, Federal Housing Administration, told 150 members of the Home Builders Association, mortgage bankers, architects and others in a meeting at the Statler Hotel that:

"In keeping with the provisions and purposes of the new housing law recently passed by Congress, the FHA will accept no more applications for Government insurance on mortgages on '608' multi-family rental projects unless they show rentals below $70 a month."

"We have sufficient applications in the higher-rent field now being processed to fill the present need for such housing in this area, and from now on we want projects at rents to meet the pocketbooks of middle-income and lower-income groups."

Hewitt said the amount of rental housing completed in Greater Washington in the past year was "tremendous" and FHA has now become "very selective" in approving insurance applications, in the conviction the higher-priced rental housing field has just about reached the saturation point.

Provisions of the new housing law were explained by a dozen experts of the FHA staff in talks and a question-and-answer period that followed.

3 Law Groups Six Schools Are Named in Hughes Will

The late Charles Evans Hughes, former Chief Justice of the United States, left a total of $145,000 to six schools and three legal organizations, according to his will, filed at the District of Columbia.

The residue of his estate, the value of which was not specified, has been left in equal shares to his son, Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., and two daughters, Mrs. Catherine Hughes Waddell and Mrs. Elizabeth Hughes Gossett.

Justice Hughes died August 27 at Osterville, Mass. He was 86 years old. He made his home in Washington at 2223 R st. nw.

According to the will, his law books, correspondence and papers are to go to his son.

Brown University, Providence, R. I., and the Bar Association of New York City are to receive 25,000 each, and Wellesley College, Wellesley, Mass.; Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Barnard College, New York City; Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y.; and Amherst College, Amherst, Mass., and the New York County Lawyers Association are each to receive $15,000.

The Legal Aid Society, New York City, was bequeathed $5000. In addition, his secretary, Wendell W. Mischler, was bequeathed $5000.

His son and two sons-in-law, Chauncey Lockhart Waddell and William Thomas Gossett, were named executors.

Justice Hughes, who was for many years in the political limelight, served twice as Governor of New York. He was defeated by Woodrow Wilson in the presidential election of 1916.

His wife died in 1945.

Malingering In Police, Fire Depts. Denied

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a report prepared by city officials denying congressional charges of abuse of sick leave in the Police and Fire Departments.

The report was made by Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett, Fire Chief Clement Murphy and Dr. John A. Reed, chairman of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons, at the request of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Incorporated in it, too, was a study of a charge made by Barrett before the Senate group that "if all men on retirement for disability with less than 30 years' service and under the age of 55 were examined, between 60 and 75 would be found physically fit and available for restoration to duty."

Wrong Impression

Dr. Reed noted in his report that the superintendent "felt that the statement quoted was not the impression he desired to give the committee."

"Both the superintendent and the chief engineer feel that the men now on the retired list would be absolutely worthless and a burden if they were returned to their respective departments," Dr. Reed told the Commissioners.

Furthermore, Dr. Reed noted in the past 20 years only one man on the retired list has been returned to active duty, although the board examines such persons every two years until they reach 55 years of age.

In the Fire Department, the average age of retirement has been 58.5 years and the average age of death for the retired officers has been 62.7 years, which indicates an approximate expectancy after retirement of four years, Dr. Reed commented.

No Malingering

On sick leave, the three officials agreed that the uniformed men have not been malingering. Dr. Reed pointed out that the average days of sick leave per man in the Fire Department during the fiscal year 1948 was 13.36. In the Police Department it was 16.7 days.

He compared this to the average sick leave among civilian workers in the government, which ranges from 7.4 days to 12 days a year.

"When the hazardous work of the men in the Police and Fire Departments is considered, together with the shifting hours of work, it is the opinion of this medical board that the sick leave record is unusually good."

Both Barrett and Murphy outlined safeguards they have invoked to guard against "riding the sick book." Each force now has a man on duty at the clinics to watch those reporting sick and will launch an investigation of any suspicious cases.

Convalescent officers are returned to light duties, such as clerical work in the Police Department and communications system activities in the Fire Department, it was reported, as a means of reducing sick leave.

FBI Report Lists 1867 Such Crimes In First Half Year; Detroit Is Second

Washington led all cities in the country in the number of aggravated assault cases during the first six months of 1948, a Federal Bureau of Investigation report disclosed yesterday.

The FBI, in its semi-annual crime reports, announced there were 1867 such assaults in the District during the first half of this year. Second was Detroit with 1581 aggravated assaults.

Washington had only 1025 aggravated assaults for the first six months of 1947.

There was also a sharp swing upward over the comparable period of 1947 in the number of robbery cases reported in the District during the first half of 1948, from 447 to 676.

In this crime category, Washington was fifth among 93 American cities of more than 10,000 population.

Washington's national ranking was first six months figures for 1947 and 1948 in five other crime classifications follow:

Homicides—tied for eleventh; 36 in 1947; 30 in 1948.
Burglary—fifth; 2641 in 1947; 2381 in 1948.

Larcenies of $50 or more—fourth; 823 in 1947; 1007 in 1948.
Larcenies less than $50—fourth; 5598 in 1947; 4858 in 1948.

Auto thefts—tenth; 730 in 1947; 832 in 1948.

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, complimented the FBI bulletin as "a true report."

"Our crime reporting system has been changed," he said, "and there is nothing to be alarmed about." Barrett said crime suppression will improve when the department gets 200 new policemen.

The extra policemen have been authorized by a congressional appropriation but the men have not yet been recruited.

The FBI report also notes that Washington ranks ninth among major American cities in the number of police department employees. As of April 30, the FBI said, the local department had 1732 officers and 157 civilian employees for a total of 1889.

Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, assistant superintendent who installed the local department's new crime reporting system, commented:

"Our increase as shown in the FBI figures can be attributed to our more accurate system of crime reporting." (The new system was installed after The Washington Post disclosed that police were systematically withholding crime reports from official figures.)

For example, he pointed out, the total aggravated assaults now includes all cases where a weapon of any nature was used, regardless of how slight the injury to the victim. Previously, many of these cases were chalked off as simple assaults.

Samuel Harrison Given Streets Engineer Post

Samuel R. Harrison, a District government employee for 27 years, yesterday was promoted to District engineer of streets at a salary of $8179 a year. Harrison, 46, succeeds J. N. Robertson, who is now director of highways.

In two other promotions caused by Robertson's elevation, Leland M. Hedgecock, 47, was named deputy engineer of streets at $7102, and Lewis R. Watson, Jr., 48, was appointed chief of construction and design at $7102 a year.

Hedgecock, who was chief of construction and design, was already drawing $7102, but Watson, formerly office engineer, received an increase from a previous $4902-a-year salary.

The promotions were made by the District Commissioner on the recommendation of Robertson.

George Adams, 58, of 3601 Benning rd. ne., yesterday was ordered held under $500 bond for grand jury action on a charge of assaulting a police officer.

Police said that Adams, who was a passenger in a truck, assaulted Pvt. Wyatt J. Roy, jr., 23, when he reproved the truck driver for driving past a crosswalk at 34th st. and Benning rd. ne. Monday.

Roy had to subdue Adams with a blackjack before the fracas ended, according to police. Both men required hospital treatment.

HOPEFUL—"Mother" Emma Steed may read again

She's 84, she can't see to dial a telephone, but she waves for the camera like a teen-ager and says, "So long, kid!"

That's Mrs. Emma C. Steed—"Mother" Steed to the thousands of World War I and II soldiers who served at the 1004 Base Hospital in Dijon, France, in 1918-19 and at Service Club No. 1 and the United Nations Service Club here from 1942 to 1946.

The "girls" of the Women's Overseas League and of her own St. George's Episcopal Church gave Mrs. Steed a party on her birthday anniversary the other day at the old house at 5321 N. Fairfax dr., Arlington, Va.

But Mother Steed still gets her biggest kick out of a visit, a letter—from Germany or Japan or almost anywhere—or a telephone call from one of her "boys." One of her World War I "boys" phoned from Brooklyn not long ago to wish her well. He's a grandfather now.

Mother Steed's fond hope is that the eye specialists who've been treating her for two years may soon enable her to see well enough to read. She lost the sight of one eye in France in 1919, and the other was severely injured two years ago when she was struck by a foul ball at a servicemen's softball game in Rock Creek Park.

After 11 months in hospital, she's back at the half-acre summer place her husband of 54 years bought in 1908 when Arlington County had 4000 instead of 125,000 or more people. Next to her sight she'd like to have back the Civilian Meritorious Service certificate awarded her by the President of the United States on January 31, 1947, for "outstanding fidelity and meritorious conduct in aid of the war effort." It disappeared, along with many prized photographs, during her illness.

She now prizes most a framed letter from her Dijon commander in 1919, Lieut. Col. H. H. Van Kirk, Medical Corps, about her "motherly love" and stating: "By your unflinching devotion to the welfare and comfort of the boys, you have gained a love in the heart of each one."

Perhaps attributable to their life-long interest in younger people—they had no children—both Mrs. Steed and her husband, Josiah, 86, held their years in appearance and actions. Mr. Steed retired 14 years ago after 50 years with the Government. He does the marketing, gardens, reads to his wife, blesses the radio that helps entertain her and wishes he could spend every cent he has if only it would restore her vision.

"Come again soon, boys," says Mother Steed at leaving time. "Maybe I'll have my new glasses then. So long, kids!"

Forrest S. Rutherford, 67, Washington representative of the Republic Steel Co. since 1932, died at his home here Monday night.

Mr. Rutherford, who lived at 2500 Massachusetts ave. nw., came from Youngstown, Ohio, where he had been executive assistant to the president of Republic Steel for several years. Previously he had represented the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. in cities throughout the Middle West.

A native of Charleston, W. Va., Rutherford lived in Council Bluffs, Iowa, in his youth.

Though his formal education did not extend past his early teens, friends said, he was the author of several plays and a book, "William Shakespeare—a Nom de Plume." It dealt with the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy.

One of his plays, "Her Salary Man," was produced on the New York stage in 1922.

He is survived by his widow, the former Althea Jewell, who was piano accompanist for Alma Gluck, opera and concert soprano.

Mr. Dawe had lived at the Hurt Home for the Blind early this year, after residing mostly since World War I at 114 Cedar ave., Takoma Park, Md. He came to the United States in 1883, attended Wilbraham (Mass.) Academy for two years and later taught English there. He became a citizen in 1894.

He was an organizer and managing director of the Southern Commercial Congress, forerunner of the United States Chamber of Commerce, in the early 1900s. He edited Nation's Business for 2 years before World War I. He served with Funk & Wagnalls, Review of Reviews and Butterick Publishing Co. He was secretary of the Society of American Authors from 1898 to 1903.

Mr. Dawe published "The Philosophy of the State" with the Rev. Charles A. Hart in 1904. In the 1890s he had conducted a syndicated column, "Rambling Thoughts on Nemo," in New York, and another, "Date Briefs as a Gateway to Knowledge," later.

Mr. Dawe was Y.M.C.A. personnel director in Europe in the First World War, later organized boys clubs in New York State, and lectured on the Chautauque circuit. He was a special representative of the British Purchasing Commission here from 1942 to 1945.

Mr. Dawe is survived by his second wife, Mrs. Cynthia Anne Shaen Dawe, Van Nuys, Calif., and five sons. The remains will be sent to Plymouth at 5 p. m. today from Chambers Georgetown funeral home.

YWCA Leaders From Abroad Visit Capital

By Genevieve Reynolds

Fifty dusty, tired but jubilant YWCA women leaders from 26 foreign countries arrived in Washington yesterday for their first glimpse of the Nation's Capital. They came from New York City on a chartered bus, and shortly after removing travel grime they were welcomed by Mrs. George Marshall, wife of the Secretary of State.

Mrs. Marshall, in one of her rare public appearances, greeted the young visitors at a dinner given in their honor by the District Young Women's Christian Association.

High lights of their three-day stay will be tea at the White House, today, 4 p.m., when Mrs. John W. Snyder, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, will receive the distinguished visitors in the absence of the First Lady. Mrs. Truman is at the summer White House in Independence, Mo.

Chosen by the YWCAs of their own countries, the young women came to the United States to attend the first International Study Conference on Women and World Reconstruction. The conference, sponsored by the Foreign Division of the YWCA National Board, has been in session during the past month, at Teachers College, Columbia University. It brought together young women of outstanding ability—mostly in their early thirties—from many countries, including Siam, Burma, India, Pakistan, China, Mexico, Chile, Brazil, Argentina.

Following their visit to Washington they will scatter to various towns and cities to study individual procedures as practiced in the United States. Miss Isabel Catto, head of the expeditionary forces branches of Great Britain, will remain at the local YWCA here for study. She is the daughter of Lord Catto, governor of the Bank of England.

Today 20 Capital hostesses will entertain small groups of the visitors at luncheons in their homes. Thursday the entire group will meet diplomatic, Cabinet, said Supreme Court wives at a tea, given by the local YWCA board members. The event will be held at Barker Hall.

Plan Membership Luncheon

Alexandria Chapter of Hadassah will open its fall season with a membership luncheon, Tuesday, 1 p.m., at the home of Mrs. A. O. Brill, 3400 Russell rd., Alexandria. Mrs. Samuel Novak, membership chairman, and her co-chairmen Mrs. Max Levy and Mrs. Daniel Jaffee, are in charge of the event. Chairman of the program committee is Mrs. Frank Selling.

Present slate of officers includes Mrs. Eli Kristal, president; Mrs. Al Levinson and Mrs. Samuel Novak, vice president; Mrs. Albert Baker, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph Miller, financial secretary; Mrs. David Burke, recording secretary, and Mrs. Herman Grenadier, corresponding secretary.

Woman Is Up in Arms Against Dog Lovers Who Force Pets on Friends, Bringing Them to Visit While Knowing They Aren't Welcome House Guests

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps through the medium of your column this protest will reach some few dog lovers I know, who insist upon forcing their pets on friends, although knowing that the pet isn't welcome as a house guest.

Among my friends are three couples who visit our home, and I enjoy having them very much, but due to the fact that they always bring Fido along, I am seriously thinking of terminating these friendships.

My rugs are taking a beating from these canine callers, and the last straw is that the pets, with their owners' tacit permission, take naps in my bed while here. It seems the dogs have this privilege at home, day and night, but I object to sharing my bed with a dog.

What course should I take, in defending my property and my preference? Should I break off the friendships without explaining my motive? Or should I "speak my piece," once and for all, and let them take it or leave it? Your opinion will be much appreciated. E. F.

Dog Owner Sides With Complainant

DEAR E. F. As it happens, I am not a dog owner, and it seemed to me a fair reaction to get a dog owner's opinion of your attitude. Therefore I hit on a householder whose taste and judgment I respect, a person who is sympathetically fond of dogs and has owned two in 20 years, giving them devoted care from puppyhood until their death, one from old age, another by accident.

This person raves dispassionately of your bill-of-particulars, "The friends have poor manners and their dogs haven't been properly taught. It is traditional courtesy among well-mannered dog owners that one doesn't visit a dog on others' homes without asking permission and seeing that the dog behaves, that he doesn't make a nuisance of himself, if privileged to call."

What is nuisance behavior in a visiting dog, I asked, and was told "Misuse of rugs, scrambling into the hostess' chairs, roaming the house for a place to nap."

Also I'm told that a properly taught dog may be given routine privileges at home, such as having a favorite chair reserved for him, or being allowed to snooze on the master's bed, and yet with sufficient quiet schooling imbibe the social lesson that he's not to expect, and won't be permitted, similar favors in other households.

Take Firm Stand Against Nuisance

BY WAY of analogous illustrations, the case was cited of a puppy newly acquired by two sisters and confronted by a situation where one sister cordially nested him on the foot of her bed, whereas the other wouldn't tolerate it. In less than a week he got the drift, after the second sister had firmly plucked him off her bed 17 times one day, three times the following day and once the third day. By then, puppy knew in his bones which bed to avoid.

For advice, our mentor in this matter says: 1. In your shoes, she wouldn't angrily drop her friends because of their slack supervision of their pets. 2. She would, however, "clearly and pleasantly" state her objection to their pets' nuisance behavior on her premises.

But how? To that she answered, "So much depends on the intelligence and temperament of the friends. In any event, one can convey the idea, and if the friends don't respond in a considerate cooperative way, a firm stand against their bringing the dog may be taken, which still leaves the choice up to them, as to whether they wish to be friends or not." Nice dog owner speaking, don't you think? M. H.

Previewing Air Force's Program for Training Its Feminine Contingent

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

LACKLAND AIR FORCE BASE, San Antonio, Tex.—Today, when recruitment for women in the Air Force (WAFS) commences, the United States Government launches a new adventure in patriotism, a newly permanent career for up-and-coming women. By congressional act, the WAFS are to recruit an initial 4000 enlisted women, 300 officers and 40 warrant officers. Then, after July 1, 1950, the enrollment may be stepped up to equal 2 per cent of the authorized over-all air force strength.

Down here at Lackland Field, where future feminine air force members will be given an 11 weeks basic training course, we have been privileged to a preview, a behind-scenes peep at what the first batch of trainees will be doing after their arrival, October 15.

First and most important, WAFs will be United States Army permanent, not members of a temporary wartime military setup. Except for a few inconsequential differences, their training will be identical to that of male trainees, while the flight chief and instructors' schools will be co-educational, and come January 1 some 25 apt WAFs will be admitted on equal status to the six months' officers' training course. They'll receive the same pay, opportunities for advancement, retirement benefits as masculine soldiers and officers. All of which is reassuring indeed.

So far the WAF personnel consists of women with prior military training who have returned from civilian life: WACS reenlisting in the WAF who will retain their same grade and if already at an air force station will remain on the same duty assignment.

Flight Chief's School Begins

ALL the new enlistees, in batches of 300, will be sent to Lackland Field. To take care of them, a permanent staff of 75 to 100 will be stationed at the field. So far seven officers and 28 enlisted women are holding down the fort and a number are enrolled already in the flight chief's school. Around an air training base a flight chief is an important personage, responsible for a basic group of 60 trainees whom they teach how to drill, see that they are at the right place at the right time and are continuously on good behavior. The WAFs plan to have three flight chiefs and an equal number of assistants.

The main raison d'être for the WAFs is to relieve men for combat duty. During the war the WAC boast was that each replaced a man—but the WAFs plan to do better—each intends to replace at least three. And if the training course scope is any indication—they certainly will.

The course is divided into four sections, orientation, administrative instruction, elementary aeronautics, military science and tactics. In the 440 hours it takes to whip through the course the trainees get a good grounding in such widely varied subjects as military aviation history, basic weather, defense against aerial attack, guided missiles, atomic, bacteriological and chemical warfare, map reading, military law. Once the trainee has passed successfully she is classified and, if apt, eligible for admission to all sorts of air force special schools such as radio, radar, photography—all of which are excellent preparation for a profitable career after army retirement. But regardless of what a WAF does she's an integral part of the Air Force.

Poking Around Headquarters

AT LACKLAND, or rather at adjoining Kelly Field, where the housing situation is less tight, we poked about WAF headquarters, can report that before October 15 everything will be running smoothly, life will be exceedingly comfortable.

In the single officers' barracks as yet functioning, each officer has a bed and sitting room plus a large communal parlor (still unfurnished), a kitchen for off duty snacks, a laundry-pressing room, two baths and a weller of showers. Non-commissioned officers each have a bedroom to themselves and the trainees will be double-bunked two to a cubicle or tropically partitioned room.

In the near vicinity there is a chapel, a moving picture theater, a gym with outdoor swimming pool and a post exchange where trucks were backing to the door in anticipation of immediate opening. There's a noncommissioned officers' club and the officers belong to the very elegant officers' club, a grandiose place expensively decorated and including everything from an a la carte restaurant, open until late night, a fine bar, dressy powder rooms, lounges and suites of bedroom-sitting rooms for visiting VIPs (Very Important People).

One of the most interesting feminine angles is the WAF mess and how it's run. Captain Ingalls, who heads the mess, is the last word in new ideas on mass cookery. Though a master menu is made up in Washington, she is allowed to change the menus to suit women's gastronomical whims. She gets field ration A, which includes many fresh fruits and vegetables. The trainees, who get very hungry, will have heavier, starchier menus but weight will be kept down by watching each individually, working closely with the "medics."

Meals are served cafeteria style, with the "cold line" first, hot dishes last, to keep them piping. Lamb is actually being cooked while the WAFs go down the line. To encourage moderate helpings, there's a "hot wagon" which perambulates between tables for those desiring second helpings.

Just to show, here's last Thursday's dinner: Veal stew, green beans and bacon, creamed onions, individual orange and cottage cheese salad, ice cream, bread, butter, iced tea.

Once Army cooks were chosen from among the dumbest—but not today. Captain Ingalls is determined to glamorize WAF cooking. Kitchen helpers, known as Food Service Apprentices, are now first class privates, second cooks are sergeants, first cooks staff sergeants and mess stewards (the old time mess sergeant) rate from technical to master sergeants. Snappy cooks are eligible to attend the 9½-months' course of advanced food service at Camp Lee, Va., or a 5-months' course in subsistence under the quartermaster at Chicago. One of the WAF cooks, incidentally, is getting set to run a California restaurant when she retires from Army life.

The Eligibility Requirements

TO BE eligible for the WAFs, women with prior military service or WACS can reenlist after passing certain examinations. Women without previous military experience must be unmarried and 18 to 35. Those under 21 must have their parents' consent in writing. No woman with a child under 18 can join and all married women or those marrying after enlistment must serve a year of current enlistment before being eligible for discharge—unless discharge is requested because of pregnancy.

Besides pay and keep the enlisted woman receives all uniforms and underpinnings from stockings to pajamas, to girdles and bras. And whisper it softly, those terrible khaki colored unmentionables issued during the war are being replaced by white—and possibly pink—numbers!

Pay starts with training, an enlisted woman pulling down $75 monthly and progressing through noncommissioned ranks to $165 for a master sergeant. Every three years they're entitled to what's called a "fogey"—a 5 per cent pay increase. Officers pay for their uniforms, their own subsistence at very reasonable mess rates—but get a $21-dollar-a-month allowance to cover this and, should they live away from Government quarters, a monthly rental allowance.

After 20 years enlisted women and noncommissioned officers can retire on pensions ranging from $48.75 to $107.25 a month. Officers, unless retired for illness, must stick around 30 years and then get three-quarters of their base pay plus "fogey."

Colonel May Is Leader

HEAD of the WAFs is Col. Geraldine May, a tiny, trig but devastatingly efficient woman who graduated with the first WAC officer candidate class at Des Moines back in 1942. Colonel May served as WAC staff director for the Air Transport Command during the war and two years ago was transferred to the War Department General Staff in Washington. After a brief stint as staff director for the Army Ground Forces at Fort Monroe, Va., where she supervised the activities of all WAC personnel in six armies, she was transferred to Army headquarters to formulate a program for WAFs in the reserve. Colonel May has been awarded the Legion of Merit and the Army Commendation Ribbon.

After our preview we're convinced the WAFs will turn into a very stylish organization—so hop to it, girls; get under the wire before the quota's filled.

Presidential Candidates Are Right in Style

Presidential Candidates Truman, Dewey and Wallace admit that their campaign treasuries show a deficit, and that they've been spending more money than they've been taking in.

Like millions of their fellow Americans, they've been talking about the Marshall Plan but living on the Morris Plan.

MISCELLANY

A standard sight at stadium fights is a Clark Griffith in a Joe College sports shirt, chewing furiously at a wad of gum... Jerry Bojn returns from a visit to Columbus and reports that Ohio State University terraces display little signs with the plea, "I want to be a lawn"... Prof. John Sherman Myers of the Washington College of Law files notice that he's appealing my definition of "bogey," and cites as his authority "Golf—Its Rules and Decisions," by Richard S. Francis. (Leave it to a lawyer to quote you the law.) He says: "Bogey is a score made to fit a course. It represents the score an average golfer would make by proper play, within his distance-getting ability." In other words, a 145-yarder would be a par three and a bogey three; whereas at 210 yards they'd be par three and bogey four... M. F. sends in an enthusiastic report on the kitten Give-Away she claimed recently, and says that her new pet is a world of fun. "But don't publish my name, because we're not permitted to have pets in this apartment house"... Hmmm. Wonder how long she'll get away with that. I've never been brave enough to try it... The City Directory people called me the other day. "We saw your item about the mistake in your listing, and we're terribly embarrassed," I was told. "Give us the correct facts so that we won't make the same mistake again next year"... Pepsco has figured out that the cost of operating a television set is precisely 3 cents for five hours. Obviously they haven't taken into account the refreshments one must serve the neighbors during that length of time.

MAIL BAG

Dear Sir:

This is in answer to your squawks about the proposed increase in the price of haircuts. You fellows all put up the same argument, about barbers playing the horses all the time. For your information there are hundreds of barbers who don't even look at a racing form.

There are barbers who try to live a clean life and try to maintain a decent home for their families. They pay the same amount of rent and taxes you do, and the same 23 cents for a quart of milk for the baby.

I'll bet you birds don't squawk when the price of your favorite brand of liquor goes up a quarter. The ladies pay $3 and $3.50

Leonard Lyons...

NEW YORK—Time magazine is devoting a cover to Anna Pauker, the Communist leader of Romania, but cannot find its Pauker file. Somewhere in the vast libraries of Time, Inc., someone threw away the Pauker clips, and now the editors are desperately phoning correspondents to get enough copy in time for the cover story.

General Eisenhower's story "Crusade in Europe" will be syndicated the week after election, in 30 instalments of 1500 words each.

Palo Alto, Calif., the home of Herbert Hoover, is a little touch of Maine in California: It's the most Republican city in America. One of Mr. Hoover's friends, William I. Nichols, editor of This Week, once spent some time in Palo Alto and received bills which listed such items as "Municipal Tax for Water, Gas, Electricity, Schools, Hospitals, Municipal Tax for Psychiatric Institution, etc." "This is socialism, pure socialism," he suggested to the Republican leaders. "Yes," they assured him, "but it's OUR kind of socialism."

Walter Duranty, the veteran Moscow correspondent, is in Florida completing his newest book, "Politburo"... Joseph Cotten, now in London making "Under Capricorn," invited Mel-Patton and other Olympic stars to his hotel room, where the waiters reported the mad goings-on: Americans, making chocolate malted-milk in cocktail shakers... George S. Kaufman was in Boston with "Town House," the play he directed, during the long heatwave. The weather, of course, affected the receipts. Kaufman looked at the thermometer and sighed: It's tough when the temperature is higher than the gross.

G. B. Shaw replies to letter-writers with a postcard on which is printed: "Mr. Bernard Shaw, having now no time for any except the most urgent private correspondence, must refer you to founder of the Shaw Society, 7 Harrington Square, London n.w., who is better informed on many points than Mr. Shaw himself."

for a hair-do and there's no squawk. So polish your own chin, cut your own hair, or pay for it. Eugene D. Yates 4009 Davis pl. n.w.

Dear Sir:

I think you're mistaken in your belief that there was no protest against increased liquor prices.

When the OPA went off and prices soared, sales of wet goods showed a substantial drop.

Dear Sir:

I first made sure that he was equipped with a crying towel, and I with rubber boots.

As for the horses, there was no charge that barbers as a group are any worse (or better) than butchers, bakers, or reporters. My point was that a man who has enough money to play the races doesn't seem to be in dire straits. Sure it's tough to raise a family and make both ends meet. But it gets tougher on all of us every time another price is raised—whether it's the milkman's or the barber's. BILL

P. S. Women don't squawk about beauty parlor prices because it's really their hard-working husbands who pay them.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Two clean, healthy kittens, both females." (Emerson 0135.)

CUKE AS A COOLCUMBER

When I saw Matchmaker Gabe Menendez at the Charles-Blivins fight Monday night I glanced up at the stadium seats and asked, "Well, Gabe, did you get the 15,000 attendance you were hoping for?"

I think Gabe must have been a bit excited by the huge turnout. His reply was:

"I haven't seen him yet, but maybe he's down at ringside."

If I'd have asked him whether he'd seen Fovitch, he probably would have given me the attendance figures.

REMEMBER?

Now that the Republicans have carried Maine again, the Democrats are taking heart by recalling the slogan which followed the 1936 elections: "As Maine goes, so goes Vermont."

ANYWAY, I'VE ALWAYS WONDERED WHAT I'D LOOK LIKE WITH A MUSTACHE!

Blomberg

His chief worry, the President

I cannot offer you the moon
And all the stars above . . .
But, darling, I extend to you
... My everlasting love . . .
I do not own the whole wide world . . . or even any part . . .
But I can promise you the deep
Devotion in my heart . . .
And anyway what would you do
... With all the earth and sky
... If there were none to hold your hand . . . Or kiss you when you cry? . . . What good are sun and moon to you . . .
A thunderstorm appears . . . And Life becomes a rising tide . . .
Of many doubts and fears? . . .
But I can give you comfort in ... A simple sort of way . . .
And, darling, I can cherish you
Forever and a day.
